CHARLOTTE HOPE 15-YEAR-OLD HIGH SCHOOL GIRL MISSING

3 ALARMS FOR POSSE GYM FIRE

Fire today destroyed the Posse gymnasium at St. Botolph and Garrison streets, Back Bay, causing a loss of $30,000. The State police are investigating to determine the cause of the blaze. It has been rumored that letters have been received, threatening destruction of the building by fire. The structure is owned by the Boston Musicians' Protective Association which occupied the basement.

Fanned by a stiff south wind, the flames licked close to the Lundin Turkish baths adjoining the gymnasium building. The Technology laboratories were separated from the burning gymnasium in the rear by only a narrow alley. The firemen managed to hold the flames to the gymnasium building after a lively battle.

One hundred tenants of the Harcourt Chambers, on the other side of the Turkish baths, were roused and made ready to get out. They dressed hurriedly and came down to the lower hallway, but did not have to leave.

Guests at Garrison Hall, on an opposite corner, watched the fire with keen interest, especially when wind blew smoke and sparks their way.

Patrolman L. V. Carty of Back Bay station and two newsboys, David Lighton of No. 13 North Russell street, West End, and Meyer Levine, discovered the fire, gave the alarm and notified tenants in the nearby buildings. The two "newsies" raced through the Lundin baths from top to bottom, but reported finding no one there.

Owned by Baroness.

The destruction of the Posse gymnasium, owned by Baroness Rose Posse, will inconvenience many wealthy Back Bay women who have patronized the gym.

The gymnasium is a two-story brick building, facing 125 feet on St. Botolph street and running back 75 feet on Garrison street. It is higher than the average two-story building, each story being extra posted to allow for the depth required for the gymnasium and its apparatus. In the building were dressing rooms, baths, offices and other accessories to gymnasium work.

The headquarters of the Boston Musicians' Protective Association occupied part of the gym basement.

The gymnasium was empty at the time of the fire, so far as known. The fireman is scheduled to start up the fires at 5 o'clock in the morning. After he goes no one is there until the janitor opens the building at 8.

Saw Flame on the Roof.

At 6:45 Patrolman Carty was standing at the corner of St. Botolph and Garrison streets, listening to the two newsboys, Levine and Lighton, discussing the cold weather.

Suddenly one of the sharp-eyed "newsies" spied a tongue of flame and a curl of smoke issuing from the roof of the gym, near a chimney. He told Carty.

"Don't pull any alarm; I'll telephone,"

Pope Has Cold and Fever; Great Anxiety at Rome

ROME, March 8.—It was announced at the Vatican late this afternoon that Pope Pius X. had suspended all audiences until further notice and that his physicians report the aged pontiff is suffering from a severe sore throat accompanied by a considerable degree of fever.

There is great anxiety at the Vatican as the result of these reports, owing to the advanced age and generally feeble condition of the Pope.

In the newspaper Observatore Romano, announcement is made that the pontiff's malady is an acute attack of bronchitis with a complication of influenza, and that the fever caused by the complication of these two ailments gives cause for grave anxiety.

100 GUESTS FLEE FROM HOTEL FIRE

NEW YORK, March 8.—Nearly 100 guests of the Hotel Burlington, an apartment house on Thirtieth street, near Fifth avenue, were placed in peril by fire which shot up from the first floor through an airshaft to the roof of the old six-story structure early today. Clad only in night clothes, the guests were driven into one of the coldest nights of the Winter. Many women were helped down ladders to the street, and some were carried across ledges into the Holland House, next door.

NEW GRAND TRUNK SHIP IS LAUNCHED

WILMINGTON, Del., March 8.—The steamer Narragansett, building for the Central Vermont railroad, was launched from the shipyards of the Harlan & Hollingsworth Corporation today. The sponsor was Mrs. J. S. Murdock of Providence, wife of the vice-president of the Grand Trunk railroad.

4 POLICE CHARGES IN STRIKE

Formal complaint against four East Boston policemen, charging discrimination against and abuse of garment strikers, were filed with Police Commissioner O'Meara today by George E. Roewer, Jr., of Roewer & Mucci, counsel for the United Garment Workers' Association.

The four policemen against whom the charges are directed are Sergeant Sweeney and Patrolmen Charles E. Gallagher, Patrick Hickey and James J. Driscoll.

O'Meara to Investigate.

Commissioner O'Meara said the charges would be given the fullest investigation.

These charges are distinct from additional complaints of cruelty and abuse exercised by policemen in the city proper against striking girls and women. These cases have been taken up by Back Bay women and are being prepared for presentation.

While Attorney Roewer was filing his charges negotiations were resumed at the Hotel Bellevue between representatives of the 12,500 garment strikers and of the manufacturers. It was believed that a settlement would be secured, based upon the Brandeis plan of preferential union shops, a joint board of sanitary control and a complete standardization of wages. This Brandeis plan has been succesfully used in the big garment workers' strikes in New York city.

The Charges.

The charges are as follows:

Stephen O'Meara, Police Commissioner,
29 Pemberton Square, Boston, Mass.

My Dear Sir—As council for the Joint Executive Board of the United Garment Workers of America, we desire to enter a formal complaint against Patrolmen Charles E. Gallagher, Patrick Hickey, James J. Driscoll and Sergeant Sweeney for gross and wanton misconduct during the disturbances which occurred in East Boston in the late afternoon of Thursday, February 20.

We are prepared to prove by eyewitnesses:

First—That the officers aforesaid in mak'ng arrests discriminated between gangsters and strikers.

Second—That Patrolman Charles E. Gallagher struck Salvatore Piscano on the back of his head with his club immediately after Piscano had been attacked by a gangster and his head opened by a piece of iron.

Third—That Patrolman Patrick Hickey, while having Luigi Capagetti under arrest and in his custody, allowed the gangsters to hit the said Capagetti, breaking his nose, and Patrolman Hickey allowed the gangsters to get away.

Charges Gangsters Protected.

Fourth—That Patrolman James J. Driscoll refused to arrest the gangsters who attacked Max Yaffe, although the said Yaffe had hold of the gangster at the time Officer Driscoll came upon the scene and rescued Yaffe from the gangsters who were assaulting him.

Fifth—That Sergeant Sweeney pointed out Ralph De Cunto, Secretary of the Joint Executive Board of the United Garment Workers Union, to the gangsters.

The court records at East Boston show that as a result of the disturbances of February 20th, eleven strikers were arested and only three gangsters were brought into court, while it is a mater of common knowledge that several hundred hoodlums and gangsters were armed with clubs, iron bars, etc., and taking an aggressive part in the disturbances with the police in the immediate vicinity.

We request you, therefore, in view of the foregoing facts, to make a thorough investigation of this matter, and if you will advise us the day and hour that you desire to hear witnesses we shall be glad to prove all of the allegations herein set forth.

Repectfully yours,
ROEWER & MUCCI,
Counsel for the U. G. W. A.

Melrose Man Keeps Unlicensed Cow; Appeals $5 Fine

While a score of his neighbors were spectators, Attorney Daniel B. Beard of Walton Park, Melrose, was fined $5 by Judge Sweetser, in the Malden District Court today, for keeping a cow without a permit from the Melrose Board of Health. The attorney was brought into court on the complaint of Dr. C. P. Holden, chairman of the Melrose Board of Health. Attorney Arthur S. Davis appeared for the government.

Attorney Beard conducted his own case and quoted many legal opinions in an effort to show that the Melrose Board of Health has no authority to require a man to obtain a permit to keep a cow. Judge Sweetser held differently and imposed fine.

Attorney Beard appealed and furnished $100 bail for his appearance before the Superior Court.

The matter of keeping chickens is agitating residents of Melrose at present.

WORLD NOVENA FOR THE IRISH CATHOLICS

NEW YORK, March 8.—Catholic Clergy in this city have received word from the Rev. Patrick Raleigh of the Order of St. Augustine that a world-wide novena has been begun at the Church of St. Patrick in Rome to ask our national apostle to continue his powerful intercession with Almighty God in favor of his scattered children all over the world that they may keep always the priceless gift of faith." The nvena, r week f special prayer, will begin tomrrrow and continue until March 17.

J. M. BAKER TO BE SENATE SECRETARY

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The Democrats of the Senate in caucus today selected James M. Baker of South Carolina, assistant librarian of the Senate, as candidate for Secretary of the Senate. This action means his election. Mr. Baker was selected on the second ballot, receiving twenty-five votes. This was the position to which Joseph R. Wilson of Tennessee, President Wilson's brother, is said to have aspired.

REAR ADMIRAL J. G. EATON DEAD

NORWELL, March 8.—Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, well known in Boston because of his service for many years at the Charlestown Navy Yard and as captain of the nautical training ship Enterprise, died at his home on Washington street, West Norwell, this morning. He had been ill only a few days. He was sixty-four years old, and leaves a wife and four daughters.

DUFFY'S ILLNESS DELAYS ELECTION

A severe cold contracted by Maurice A. Duffy of the Milton Board of Selectmen during his last campaign, prevented the election of a chairman of that board last night. Mr. Duffy was unable to attend the meeting, and as there were only two other members present, it was impossible for anyone to receive a majority.

DEATH OF POSTMAN AT EAST MILTON

Frank M. Richardson, who had been a letter carrier twenty-seven years, died at his home, No. 124 Otis street, East Milton, of pneumonia. Mr. Richardson was first appointed to serve at the South Boston postoffice. Later he was transferred to the Dorchester Centre and eight years ago to the Milton postoffice. He was fifty-six years old.

Former Hub Man Falls Over Dead After Killing Hen

WELLFLEET, March 8.—Steven Newton, a retired retail produce dealer of the Suffolk Market in Boston, today placed a hen on the chopping block in his yard, chopped off its head and fell dead beside it.

Mr. Newton, who was a bachelor and lived alone at his Summer home in Wellfleet, after a hearty breakfast, went out into the yard, according to neighbors, to kill a hen for the next day. After much exertion he got the hen he had selected.

Mr. Newton had taken it to the chopping block, seized an axe and brought it down on the block. This last exertion proved to be more than Mr. Newton could stand, for he fell dead without relaxing his hold on the legs of the hen or of the axe. Apoplexy, brought on by acute indigestion, was given as the cause of death.

Cambridge Boy at Play Killed by Trolley Car

Five-year-old Ernest Wedge of No. 10 Fairmount avenue, Cambridgeport, was killed while playing with a friend on River street, near Fairmount avenue. He ran into the street just as an inward-bound Hanover street car bowled along, driven by Marshall Boyer of No. 44 Montfren avenue, Brighton, was has been employed by the Elevated for seventeen years.

There was a scream, a crash of grinding brakes and the car was brought to a stop, but not until after the child had disappeared beneath the fender.

Jacks were secured and the heavy car lifted. The boy had been crushed between the fender and what is known as the "lifebar" of the car. He had been instantly killed.

Motorman Boyer was arrested and taken to police headquarters, where he was bailed a short time later in $5,000.

Mighty Welcome to Greeks After Taking of Janina

ATHENS, March 8.—The telegraph line to Janina, which was captured by the Greeks, has been restored. The first message received was to the Minister of War. It announced that Crown Prince Constantine entered the town at noon, surrounded by 15,000 enthusiastic citizens, who went out to meet him.

The dispatch adds that there were extraordinary scenes as the Greek cavalry and infantry marched into the city, the populace crying, cheering and embracing the soldiers. Six thousand wounded or sick Turkish soldiers were found in Janina. It is reported that the Turkish troops who escaped pillaged the shops of Christians before leaving.

Perfect order now reigns in Janina. The majority of the residents of Janina are Greeks.

Rejoicing in Manchester.

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 8.—The surrender of the Turkish fortress of Janina to the Greek army will be celebrated tomorrow by the Greek residents of this city. Plans for a parade of 1,000 men, fireworks and public meetings have been made by a committee, the members of which are natives of Janina. A. Sinadinos, Greek consul-general of Boston, is expected to deliver the principal address.

POLICE OF MANY CITIES IN HUNT

Fifteen year-old Charlotte F. Hope, a freshman in the Somerville High School, has mysteriously disappeared.

She has been missing for two days.

Her father, Frank L. Hope, of No. 14 Belknap street, West Somerville, has appealed to the police. The girl's mother is overcome and cannot talk of her missing daughter without weeping.

SEARCH EXTENDED TO FORMER HOME IN JERSEY.

Police Chief Kendall of Somerville, learning from the father that Charlotte came to live in Somerville only five weeks ago from the home o fher grandfather, James S. Britton of No. 144 Delevan street, New Brunswick, N. J., telegraphed to that city to see if Charlotte had gone back there. Up to late this afternoon no information had beer received from New Jersey.

The Boston police sent out a general alarm. The police of cities and towns to the north of Boston have descriptions of the missing school girl.

Mr. Hope has spent the last two evenings searching through Somerville and Boston for his daughter. Classmates of Charlotte are volunteer searchers, keeping watch everywhere for the first sign of the girl.

Few Recognize Her

The fact that Charlotte had been in Somerville only a few weeks reduces to a comparatively small number those people who whuld recognize her on sight.

The Belknap street hofe of the Hope family, in a comfortable "three-flat" neighborhood, is in the West Somerville section, nearly up to the Arlington lint. It is two miles from the Somerville high school.

Charlotte's school sessions did not begin until 1 o'clock on account of a division of some classes into morning and afternoon sessions, due to overcrowding.

Thurslay noon Charlotte left home in time to go to school. She could go by trolley if she wished. She had $2.40 in her purse, so far as Mrs. Hope can recall.

Vanished on Way to School.

Since the girl started off to school she has not been sen by any member of her family of any of her schoolmates. So far as known, she never arrived at the big school building on Highland avenue hill.

Somewhere between home and school the fifteen-year-old school girl dropped out of sight, so far as her home goes.

Charlotte F. Hope is fifteen years old and of slender, girlish figure. Her eyes and hair are brown. She is five feet six inches in height, a good height for a girl of fifteen.

She is of bright, lively nature and engaging manner.

When she left home she wore a black felt hat, with a green feather. The tip of the feather is black. She took her blue wolf muff, but had no neck piece.

Wore Sweater with Rolling Collar

She wore a white middy blouse and gray skirt. Over her middy blouse she drew her big red sweater, with a rolling collar. The whole is a characteristic schoolgirl outfit, warm, comfortable and practical.

When Charlotte failed to return after school no alarm was felt. Evening brought no daughter back and the father and mother wondered. As night fell their wonder grew to worry. When she did not return all night they concluded, refusing to believe any harm had befallen her, that she must have stayed with some new girl friend, without letting her parents know, in the irresponsible way that schoolgirls will.

Friday morning the outlook was more serious. Mr. Hope went to the police station and told Chief Kendall, giving description of his daughter.

Mr. Hope did not know but what Charlotte had become homesick for New Jersey, where she has passed most of her life. So Chief Kendall sent a telegram to the Police Chief in the city where Charlotte's grandfather, James S. Britton lives.

Charlotte's clothing, when she started ostensibly to school, was not such as she would ordinarily wear on an extended trip. But, so far as warmth goes, she would be well protected. With $2.40 in her pocket Charlotte could travel some distance, if she has gone away. But, outside of New Jersey, there is no place where her parents suspect she would go.

Father Searches Streets.

Mrs. Hope refers all inquiries to Mr. Hope. The latter is at a loss to explain the girl's absence. He has even come over to Boston and looked up and down the streets in theevening, in case Charlotte had ben attracted to the livelier scenes of the larger city. But no sign of her has appeared so far.

Search was made in the girl's room for any letter or other explanation to show that he going away was planned. There wasn't so much as a scrap of paper along that line.

DIAZ FORCES AND REBELS IN BIG BATTLE

MEXICO CITY, March 8.—One of the hardest fought battles of the rebellion against the Huerta-Diaz government is in progress today at Anhelo Ixtle in Coahuila, according to reports received here just before noon.

Only meagre details have been received, but sufficient to show that the 2,000 rebels under General Carranza, after a skirmish yesterday afternoon that was relinquished at nightfall, renewed an engagement early today against the federals under Genegal Trucy Aubert, General Mier and the former rebel chief, Argumedo, who has joined forces with them.

The combined federal force outnumbers the troops commanded by Carranza almost three to one, but the rebels are splendidly armed and equipped and have the advantage of greater familiarity with the country around Anhelo Ixtle, which forms their battle ground.

M'REYNOLDS FAVORS DISSOLUTION PLAN

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Attorney-General McReynolds has declared that the plan for dissolving the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific merger worked out by former Attorney General Wickersham seemed an excellent solution of the question. While approving it, however, he said the protest of the California railroad commission had changed the situation in such manner that it was now a question how far the railroads would modify the plan and to what extent they would fight the problem out in the courts with the California commission.

CRIPPEN LAWYER HELD FOR FRAUD

LONDON, March 8.—Arthur Newton, lawyer for Dr. H. H. Crippen and Ethel Lenave, was arraigned in Old Bailey Court today charged with conspiracy to defraud. After hearing the evidence of two witnesses, the magistrate held him in $50,000 for trial. A fellow barrister, W. H. Bennett, was arraigned with him. The prosecuting witness, George Thorsch, testified that Bennett was introduced as the owner of a New York paper.

KEENAN QUARRELS WITH FAVERSHAM

OMAHA, March 7.—Frank Keenan, who succeeded Tyrone Power as Cassius in William Faversham's "Julius Caesar," suddenly quit the company and an hour later was on his way to New York. His action is said to be the result of a misunderstanding with Faversham. Mr. Keenan today refused to say why he left the company, but stated that he intended to organize a Shakespearian company at once.

FORMER BOSTON MAN DIED ON LIGHTSHIP

NEWPORT, R. I., March 8.—It was learned today that the man who died on the Brenton Reef lightship, and for whom distress signals were flying, was Andrew Wicklund, sixty years old. The captain of the lightship came ashore today and secured the services of an undertaker, with whom he returned to the lightship. Wicklund died of consumption. He formerly lived in Boston.

DEMOCRATS IN STIR OVER BIG FEDERAL JCBS

Boston Democrats refused today to take seriously a morning newspaper dispatch from Washington to the effect that, because the office buildings are located in his district, Congressman William F. Murray of the Tenth Massachusetts will have the naming of:

Postmaster	$8000
Assistant	4,000
Collector of the Port	8,000
Surveyor	5,000
U. S. Sub-Treasurer	5,000
Appraiser	3,000
Collector	5,000
U. S. District Attorney	5,000
Marshal	5,000
Deputies ....$1,200 to	1,800
Immigration Commissioner	4,000

Democrats who read the dispatch this morning appeared to like every line of it. Most of the Boston men would be willing to "leave it to Murray."

Basis for Murray Story.

The basis for the Murray story appears to be the announcement by Postmaster-General Burleson that, so far as postmasterships are concerned, he will recognize Senators and Congressmen; and that in those congressional districts which are not represented by Democrats he will recognize the Democratic Senators and the National Committeeman.

From which announcement by the Postmaster-General the writer of the dispatch goes on to assume that the other Cabinet officers will "look to the same men for guidance" and that "Congressman Murray will have to pass upon the appointees of federal offices in his district, whose annual salaries aggregate more than $100,000." All the important federal officers "have their offices in buildings in Mr. Murray's district."

The Dope is Bad.

The dope is bad, one of the biggest Democrats in town said today, for the excellent reason that these places do not belong to the Murray district, but are given to Massachusetts Democrats in recognition of Democratic work and support, throughout the Commonwealth. It might be conceivable that Mr. Murray would be called upon to name a postmaster, but even the Boston postmaster is not a Tenth District postmaster, but the postmaster of Boston. It is inconceivable, for instance, that Mr. Murray could get a Boston postmaster across who was unacceptable to Congressmen Curley and Peters of Boston, or either of them.

Man of the Hour.

The big man in the present situation is Dr. John W. Coughlin of Fall River, the Massachusetts member of the Democratic National Committee, who, because Massachusetts has no Democratic United States Senator, will probably dictate appointments in the Massachusetts districts represented by Republican Congressmen.

Dr. Coughlin is likely to have an important word to say in the matter of federal officeholders here in Boston, but when all is said and done it is reasonable to expect that Governor Foss, Chairman Riley of the State Committee, Mayor Fitzgerald, Mr. Walsh, former Congressman William S. McNary, one of the early Wilson leaders in the Bay State, and Congressmen Peters, Murray, Curley, Phelan, Gilmore and Thatcher will sit down with Dr. Coughlin and reason together on all the more important appointments.

Which will probably be quite as agreeable to Mr. Murray as accepting the task of trying to please all the men who are ready to come to the aid of the party.

U. S. Government to Aid Friedmann in Serum Tests

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Sherman Allen today designated Passed Assistant Surgeons John S. Anderson and A. M. Stimson to go to New York and conduct an official investigation of the Friedmann serum and to attend any clinics that Dr. Friedmann may hold.

The public health service desires to give the doctor a chance to demonstrate the efficacy of his tuberculosis treatment. Accordingly a telegram was sent to Dr. Friedmann today by Secretary Allen saying that the government in every way will aid him in his demonstrations.

MADDEN INDICTED FOR SETTING FIRES AT CHARLESTOWN

The Suffolk County Grand Jury has reported after sitting a week, bringing in thirty-nine true bills and six no bills. No bill was found against William H. Noble of No. 111 Maverick street, East Boston, charged with putting wood alcohol in a bottle of milk with intent to kill his wife, Mary J.

Paul von Elsen of Dover street was indicted on the charge of threatening to extort money from Mary A. Finneran, a ticket seller at the Dover street station of the Boston Elevated Railway Company. Percival Dunn was indicted for polygamy.

Thomas G. Madden, accused as the firebug who caused so many conflagrations in Charlestown recently, was indicted for burning a stable owned by Francis W. Lawrence and Harry H. Wiggin on Feb. 7, in Medford street, Charlestown.

George F. Bruno and John R. Murphy were indicted for larceny from the person.

KAHN INDICTED FOR CRIMINAL LIBEL, TO BE TRIED THURSDAY

Philip L. Kahn, indicted by the Grand Jury for criminal libel in connection with Director Henry Russell of the Boston Opera House, was arraigned before Judge Brown in the Superior Court and admitted to bail of $1,000. Trial was set for Thursday.

An article which was the basis of the indictment was printed in a periodical devoted to music and the stage. The same periodical today contained an article criticizing the action of the Grand Jury and declaring that the courts had no right to make Mr. Kahn wait for a hearing.

The trial was first set for Tuesday, but Attorney Jesse Gove, counsel for Kahn, said he would have to bring witnesses from various sections of the country and couldn't be ready in that time.

FIGHT $25,000 FIRE IN SALEM; TENANTS FLEE

Fire, which kindled twice, demolished the block at Nos. 237-239 Essex street, Salem, early today and caused damage estimated at $25,000. Starting in some rubbish in the drug store of George N. Harris, the flames swept thorugh the building, forcing tenants above to flee for their lives.

WILSON OVERLOOKS HARVARD AND YALE

For the first time in many years Harvard and Yale are not represented in the President's Cabinet, although the majority of the members are college graduates.

David Franklin Houston, the new Secretary of Agriculture, holds the degree of A. M. from Harvard, but is not a Harvard man, and despite the fact that President Wilson is a Princeton man, that institution has no representation in the Cabinet.

In former administrations, particularly in that of President Taft, Yale and Harvard have been liberally represented in the government of the country, but at present they are out of the running entirely.

FIGHT FLAMES IN BACK BAY GYMNASIUM

said Carty, and dashed over to Garrison Hall. Carty 'phoned fire headquarters, which relayed the call to Back Bay station. Engine 33 and Ladder 15 started.

Meanwhile Carty came out from Garrison Hall, took a look at the gym building and hurried for the regular alarm (92) at the corner of Irvington street. For Carty had suddenly seen the flash of flame at several windows of the gym.

The first alarm came at 6:53. District Chief Ryder sounded a second at 7 flat and Chief Mullen pulled a third at 7:03.

Tenants Are Warned.

The first firemen on hand found the gymnasium building a furnace. Meanwhile, Carty had sent the two newsboys over to A. Lundin's Turkish bath, a four-story brick building, adjoining the gymnasium on the north side and rising two stories above it. The "newsies" got in by a rear door and went up to the top, but said, when they came out, that they found no one. Carty ran along to Harcourt Chambers, just beyond the baths, at No. 88 St. Botolph street, found William McCabe, the janitor, and told him tenants should be notified. Carty feared the fire would spread.

The patrolman and janitor got word to the 100 tenants in the forty suites, but, as it happened, none had to get outdoors, though they dressed in a hurry and came down to the ground floor.

The firemen couldn't get into the gymnasium, the fire was so hot. But they filled the blazing interior full of water from a score of streams. They drenched it from the front, the south side and the rear.

In the rear the firemen climbed up on the Technology chemical laboratories, a one-story structure, and played hose streams from there, keeing an eye out for any sign of the laboratory building igniting. Standing on a building filled with chemicals and explosives makes a fireman watch where the sparks are falling.

They kept the upper side wall of the Lundin baths building wet down as much as possible and prevented that building from igniting. But it was feared that smoke had managed to get into the baths.

The flames made short work of the interior of the gym. They climbed to the roof which fell in with a cascade of sparks.

Firemen in Peril.

Ladderman "Dan" O'Leary of Ladder 12 was "dogging" the top of a ladder to a second-story window of the gym just as the roof went. A sheet of flame slid through the window right at O'Leary's head. His mates below promptly played two hose streams, not right at him, for that would have knocked him off the ladder, but just over his head at the window-top. This drove back the flame and prevented O'Leary from being burned.

District Chief Daniel Sennott was cut on the head by a roof slate. Medical Examiner Magrath, who happened along, plastered up the gash and Sennott got back on the fire line again.

The falling of the roof brought the end of the fire. The firemen turned their hose streams in the roof space and drowned what was left of the fire. Water froze where it fell and the charred walls are ice-coated.

It was later learned that among the chemicals in the Tech chemical laboratory is a newly-arrived tank of oxygen. There was fear that the big tank, loaded up to high pressure, might explode in the heat.

William Crocker, janitor of the laboratory, was one of the first to see the flames. He put a ladder to a second-story window of the gym, broke the glass and got in far enough to make sure there was no one in the place.

Among the spectators who braved the cold to watch the fire were girls taking gymnasium exercises. They said they would lose athletic outfits to the value of $50 or more each. Miss Minerva H. Pray and Miss Genevieve Griffin put that value on their tennis racquets, shoes, gymnasium suits and other goods which they kept in the Posse building.

NINETEEN FIREMEN HURT IN $10,000 FIRE AT NEWBURYPORT

NEWBURYPORT, March 8.—Nineteen firemen were injured today as the result of being struck by a steel ceiling which fell while they were fighting a $10,000 fire in Music Hall on Pleasant street. The most seriously hurt are Charles H. Lovell of Engine 1, and Captain D. A. Wells and G. W. Wilson of Hose 8. They are at the Anna Jaques Hospital.

Only the gallant work of their comrades saved nineteen from death. The crash of the falling ceiling could be heard for blocks. When it fell the fire chief rushed his men to that section and began the work of rescue at once.

SUFFRAGETTES TO TOUR THE WORLD

NEW YORK, March 8.—A globe encircling trip is planned by suffragettes enthused by the hike from New York to Washington, when General Rosalie Gardner Jones and her pilgrims braved the cold and the toil of weary marching and successfully accomplished the 250-mile tramp. The suffrage leaders would now have the banner of "Votes for women" carried around the world. Of course they do not plan to hike. The pilgrimage would be made in a special train.

SUFFRAGISTS REPEAT CHARGES OF INSULTS BY POLICE AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Hundreds of women thronged the committee room in the Senate office building today, where the Senate committee is holding its hearings to investigate the conduct of the Washington police on the occasion of woman suffrage parade last Monday.

Mayor Richard Sylvester, Former Secretary of War Stimson and General Leonard Wod, Chief of Staff of the Army were present. The Rev. Dr. J. Henry Mells, pastor of the Church of the Ascension, defended Mayor Sylvester.

He described conditions on the avenue from his point of vantage at Twelfth street. He said he had never sen a pageant where the conduct of the police was more admirable. He had only one criticism to offer, and that was that he thought an officer was a little too severe in attempting to force back the crowd.

Notwithstanding the rigorous action of the police, he said, the crowd was good natured.

Says Women Were Unruly.

He described one instance wehre a woman grasped the bridle of a mounted officer's horse to hold him in check, and another case where a woman had deliberately placed a small child in front of an officer's mount to prevent him from charging against the crowd.

Dr. Mells said he had seen crowds and parades in all of the European capitals, including the Pope's jubilee and the coronation of the English King, and he never saw a more good-natured crowd nor one better handled.

The clergyman's testimony called forth from the women spectators the same sort of jeering as that of which they complained in the street crowd on Monday, and several times Chairman Jones was obliged to admonish them.

"We are trying," he said, "to investigate the disorder at the parade, and if better order is not preserved here, we may be obliged to make an inquiry into the disorder in the committee room."

Dr. Mills said he was merely stating what he saw.

"I have one of the sweetest suffregettes in my home that you ever saw" he said. "But my wife is not a suffragette. I don't mean her."

"That would not be any discredit to your wife," said Senator Jones, who comes from a State where women vote, and the suffragettes applauded.

"Well, be that as it may," replied the doctor as he left the stand.

Charge Against Policeman.

Commodore W. S. Moore told of a visit to Major Sylvester's office with a suffragette prior to the parade. He said the policeman on duty at the door treated them discourteously.

Henry D. Pierce of Indianapolis said one suffragette in riding habit was insulted by a negro in the presence of an officer. Instead of admonishing or arresting the man, Mr. Pierce said the officer only laughed.

General Anson Mills stated that Miss Alice Paul, in charge of the arrangements, had come to him and complained of the trouble she was having with the police in getting protection. Major Sylvester had expressed doubt about ability to protect the marchers. The matter of getting military escort was taken up with District Commissioner Judson. The commissioner asked him if he thought a military escort was necessary, and the witness told him that he was satisfied there would be trouble. The commissioner then asked Miss Paul to make out a regular application, which he endorsed, and General Mills and Miss Paul then took up the question with the War Department.

WILSON'S BUSY VISITING DAY; SEES JUSTICES

WASHINGTON, March 8.—President Wilson's list of engagements today was particularly heavy. The Justices of the Supreme Court were received in the Blue room. This was the first formal reception tendered by the Chief Executive to the highest tribunal.

At its conclusion the president received Miss Mary Foy, president of the Women's Democratic League of California; F. H. Learned, Assistant Commissioner of Immigration; F. P. Glass of Alabama and Governor O'Neal of the same State. Colonel E. H. House of Texas was the first to reach the White House. He called to pay his respects and to assure the President of the co-operation of the Texas Democracy in legislation.

National Committeeman E. F. Goltra of St. Louis was the next to arrive. He declares that he has no axe to grind. but—"Now, if I go home, everyone of the boys will promptly ask me if I saw the President. Now I would be a fine spectacle if I had to tell them I had not even seen him. So I'm going to stay on the job."

A special mission from Guatemala called to discuss the situation in Central America and to ascertain, if possible, the policy of the administration.

The President and Mrs. Wilson will attend the theatre for the first time tonight.

Cheer American Militant Held in English Jail

LONDON, March 8.—"Three cheers for Zelle Emerson, the American."

The shout was raised again and again by a crowd of some hundreds English women and men today and echoed back from the walls of Holloway jail, where Miss Emerson is a prisoner.

The young woman, an earnest suffragist, whose home is in Jackson, Mich., was arrested on February 14, charged with "using insulting words, throwing stones to the common danger and obstructing a policeman."

Without being given the alternative of paying a fine the American woman, twenty-six years old, of slight physique, but alert and quick, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment at hard labor. She declared at once she would go on a hunger strike and starve herself. Since that time her friends have been unable to get any tidings of her or the state of her health. They know, however, that she is being fed forcibly.

JESKA SWARTZ and Bernice Fisher as Hop-o-My-Thumb and Red Riding Hood in "The Blue Forest," which is given at the Boston Opera House today.

Performance of This Opera in Boston Is an Event of International Importance, as This Is the Second City in the World to Hear It. It Has Been Produced in Geneva, and M. Aubert Has Been Here for Weeks Giving the Production His Personal Attention.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"The Blue Forest," in which three of the most familiar fairy tales are combined, was given its first American production at the Opera this afternoon.

Director Russell secured this opera from the composer two years ago, and if it had been reached last season it would have been the first performance on any stage. During the present season, however, it was put on at the opera in Geneva.

The composer is Louis Aubert, a young Frenchman and a disciple of Debussy.

The story of the opera is charming. Little Red Riding Hood, setting out to visit her grandmother, meets Hop on My Thumb, whose parents, the poor wood cutters, have decided to abandon him in the forest. They become playmates. The beautiful Princess, who is always thinking of a Prince Charming, passes through the village and is kind to the children.

In the second act Riding Hood, lost in the woods, is discovered by the clever Hop on My Thumb, who is already planning how to reach the village again. They are scented by the terrible ogre, who captures them, but the acuteness of Hop on My Thumb enables them to escape and cause the death of the ogre. The wandering children find the palace in the woods where the Princess has been cast into a deep sleep by the wicked fairy's enchantment and they are present when Prince Charming enters and awakens the sleeping beauty with a kiss. The children have the ogre's wealth and make their poor parents happy and the Prince and Princess marry and live happily ever after.

Pretty little Bernice Fisher makes a lovely Red Riding Hood, and Jeska Swartz again plays the part of a small boy delightfully. Jean Riddez plays the Ogre, Carmen Melis, the beautiful Princess, De Potter, Prince Charming, and Elizabeth Amaden, Leveroni and other important members of the company are in the big cast.

PORK FAMINE HAS YET TO HIT BOSTON

Boston has plenty of pork, despite reports from the West that a famine exists, according to officials of the Swift and Armour companies in this city. Reports from Chicago asserted that a decrease of nearly 1,000,000 hogs in the eleven largest markets of the country has caused the price to rise alarmingly, and that within a month it will reach a record mark.

RICHARD OLNEY IS OFFERED THE BRITISH POST

Richard Olney, Secretary of State in President Cleveland's Cabinet, has been offered the post of Ambassador to Great Britain by President Wilson, according to an authentic statement from the White House at Washington.

This appointment was decided upon today, but it is not known whether Mr. Olney will accept, and the Court of St. James has not been sounded as to the acceptability of Mr. Olney.

Mr. Olney in Boston stated today that he had received no intimation direct from Washington that he had been considered for the Ambassadorship, when informed of the dispatches, and refused to discuss the matter.

Mr. Olney's service in the Cabinet of President Cleveland fitted him for diplomatic service, and it is said that President Wilson has been considering him for some time.

It is also known that the President would like to appoint Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, to a diplomatic post, but inasmuch as Dr. Eliot refused an offer from President Taft to be Ambassador to Great Britain it was not felt that he would accept.

Dr. Eliot is at present staying at the same hotel as Secretary of State Bryan, and has conferred with him. He stated that he had received no offer from President Wilson.

His friends believe that the administration may possibly seek to employ his ability on a special mission to Mexico. It is said that Dr. Eliot's assignment to a special mission to Mexico would give the new administration independent information regarding conditions in that country, and his report would command the respect of the country as a basis for future policy.

BRITISH STEAMER IN PORT, LEAKING

The British tramp steamer Pennine Range, Captain T. O. Hedley, has arrived from Fowey, England, in a leaking and battered condition. Captain Hedley was cut on the head; the cook, John Henry was badly bruised and two of the crew, John Olson and Peter Anderson were frost-bitten on the hands and face. The entire superstructure of the vessel was wrecked as the result of the pounding by the sea. The damage will amount to several thousands of dollars.

Plant Second to None for the Los Angeles Examiner

LOS ANGELES, March 8.—Two hours after arriving here William Randolph Hearst purchased for $1,074,325 more than half a block of land at Broadway, Hill and Eleventh streets. Immediately afterwards Mr. Hearst announced that before the expiration of the present year the Los Angeles Examiner would occupy on the site just purchased a permanent home that would be second to no newspaper plant in the world.

Work of constructing the new building at the southwestern corner of Eleventh street and Broadway will begin within thirty days. The property purchased by Mr. Hearst consists of twelve lots, six facing Broadway and an equal number fronting on Hill street. The property has a frontage of 322 feet on Broadway, 322 feet on Hill, and 216 feet on Eleventh street. The price paid was at the rate of $2,500 per front foot.

ANNA GOULD LOSES, SAYS ROMAN REPORT

ROME, March 8.—Final annulment of the marriage of Anna Gould and Count De Castellane has been proclaimed by the papal tribunal, known as the Tribunal of the Rota. It is also believed here that Count Boni will shortly marry an American heiress.

Dispatches from Paris cast doubt upon this announcement, but nothing official can be known until the publication of the Rota's decision is authorized at the Vatican.

Castellane and his friends are making a strong effort for annulment. His plea is based largely upon the technical point known by theologians as "lack of consent." That is, the Count alleges that just before her marriage to him in New York by the late Archbishop Corrigan, Anna Gould said to three of her women friends, "that she would give her responses to the marriage questions with a mental reservation," so that she might be free to get a divorce if she desired one in the future.

Count Castellane produces these three witnesses, but their testimony is flatly denied by his wife—who is now the civil law wife of Duke de Talleyrand, a cousin of Count Castellane.

Duke de Talleyrand joins his wife in resisting the efforts for annulment of the first marriage by the church. He says:

"If the decision is adverse to us my wife will appeal from the Tribunal of the Rota, to the Apostolic Signatura Tribunal, the supreme court of the Vatican in such matters.

"We will appeal not only because the decision is unjust, but because we do not wish to leave Count Boni de Castellane free to make a religious marriage with another American heiress," said the Duke.

"Do you think that is his intention?" asked the correspondent.

The Duke's sardonic answer was:

"The money-lenders of Paris are not so generous that they lend without good security."

HARRIS LEASES OLDEST THEATRE

William Harris of Boston and New York, father of Henry B. Harris, who went down with the Titanic, has secured control of the old Walnut Street Theatre in Philadelphia, the oldest theatre in America. THE MYSTERY OF MARY

A Thrilling Story of a Strange Disappearance and of a Love That Trusted and Was Triumphant

By GRACE LIVINGSTON HILL LUTZ

Copyright, 1912, by J. B. Lippincott Co.

THE color had come back into her cheeks when they reached the church, and he thought her a beautiful bride as he led her into the dim aisle. Some one up in the choir loft was playing the wedding march, and the minister's wife and young daughter sat waiting to witness the ceremony.

The minister met them at the door with a welcoming smile and handshake, and led them forward. As the music hushed for the words of the ceremony, he faced forward to the young man and whispered:

"I neglected to ask you her name, Tryon."

"Oh, yes." The young man paused in his dilemma and looked for an instant at the sweet face of the girl beside him. But he could not let his friend see that he did not know the name of his wife-to-be, and with quick thought he answered "Mary!"

The ceremony proceeded, and the minister's voice sounded out solemnly in the empty church: "Do you, Tryon, take this woman whom you hold by the hand to be your lawful wedded wife?"

The young man's fingers held the timid hand of the woman firmly as he answered "I do."

"Do you, Mary, take this man?" came the next question, and the girl looked up with clear eyes and said, "I do."

Then the minister's wife, who knew and prized Tryon Dunham's friendship, said to herself: "It's all right. She loves him."

When the solemn words were spoken that bound them together through life, and they had thanked their kind friends and were once more out in the carriage, Tryon said:

"Do you know you haven't told me your real name yet?"

Her Real Name

She laughed happily as the carriage started on its way, and answered, "Why, it is Mary!"

As the carriage rounded the first corner beyond the church, two breathless individuals hurried up from the other direction. One was short and baggy, and the sole of one rubber flopped dismally as he struggled to keep up with the alert strides of the other man, who was slim and angry.

They had been detained by an altercation with the matron of the Y. W. C. A. Building, and puzzled by the story of the plainly dressed girl who had taken the room, and the fine lady who had left the building in company with a gentleman, until it was settled by the elevator boy, who declared the two women to be one and the same.

A MOMENT later a man in citizen's clothing, who had keen eyes and who was riding a motorcycle, rounded the corner and puffed placidly along near the two. He appeared to be looking at the numbers on the other side of the street, but he heard every word that they said as they caught sight of the disappearing carriage and hurried after it. He had been standing in the entrance of the Y. W. C. A. building, an apparently careless observer, while the elevator boy gave his evidence.

The motorcycle shot ahead a few rods, passed the carriage, and discovered by a keen glance who were the occupants. Then it rounded the block and came almost up to the two pursuers again.

When the carriage stopped at the side entrance of a hotel the man on the motorcycle was ahead of the pursuers and discovered it first, long enough to see the two get out and go up the marble steps. The carriage was driving away when the thin man came along half a block behind his padded feet coming down in heavy, dragging thuds like a St. Bernard dog in bedroom slippers.

One glimpse the pursuers had of their prey as the elevator shot upward. They managed to evade the hotel authorities and get up the wide staircase without observation. By keeping on the alert, they discovered that the elevator had stopped at the second floor, so the people they were tracking must have apartments there.

He Goes to the Engravers

Lurking in the shadowy parts of the hall, they watched, and soon were rewarded by seeing Dunham come out of a room and hurry to the elevator. He had remembered his promise to his mother about the engravers. As soon as he was gone, they presented themselves boldly at the door.

Filled with the joy that had come to her and feeling entirely safe now in the protection of her husband, Mary Dunham opened the door. She supposed, of course, it was the bellboy with a pitcher of ice water, for which she had just rung.

"Ah, here you are at last, my pretty cousin!" It was the voice of Richard that menaced her, with all the stored-up wrath of his long-baffled search.

At that moment the man from the motorcycle stepped softly up to the top stair and slid unseen into the shadows of the hall.

For an instant it seemed to Mary Dunham that she was going to faint, and in one swift flash of thought she saw herself overpowered and carried into hiding before her husband should return.

But with a supreme effort she controlled herself, and faced her tormentor with unflinching gaze. Though her strength had deserted her at first, every faculty was now k[illegible] and collected. As if nothing unusual were happening, she put out her cold, trembling fingers and laid them firmly over the electric button on the wall. Then with new strength coming from the certainty that some one would come to her aid, she opened her lips to speak.

"What are you doing here, Richard?"

"I've come after you, my lady. A nice chase you've led me, but you shall pay for it now."

"Will I Have to Bind You?"

The cruelty in his face eclipsed any lines of beauty which might have been there. The girl's heart froze within her as she looked once more into those eyes, which had always seemed to her like sword-points.

"I shall never go anywhere with you," she answered steadily.

He seized her delicate wrist roughly, twisting it with the cold wrench with which he had tormented her in their childhood days. None of them saw the stranger who was quietly walking down the hall toward them.

"Will you go peaceably, or shall I have to gag and bind you?" said Richard. "Choose quickly. I'm in no mood to trifle with you any longer."

Although he hurt her wrist cruelly, she threw herself back from him and with her other hand pressed still harder against the electric button. The bell was ringing furiously down in the office, but the walls were thick and the halls lofty. It could not be heard above.

"Catch that other hand, Mike," commanded Richard, "and stuff this in her mouth, while I tie her hands behind her back."

It was then that Mary screamed. The man in the shadow stepped up behind and said in a low voice:

"What does all this mean?"

The two men, startled, dropped the girl's hands for the instant. Then Richard, white with anger at this interference, answered insolently: "It means that this girl's an escaped lunatic, and we're sent to take her back. She's dangerous, so you'd better keep out of the way."

Then Mary Dunham's voice, clear and penetrating, rang through the halls:

"Tyron, Tyron! Come quick! Help! Help!"

As if in answer to her call the elevator shot up to the second floor and Tyron Dunham stepped out in time to see the two men snatch Mary's hands again and attempt to bind them behind her back.

In an instant he had seized Richard by the collar and landed him on the hall carpet, while a well-directed blow sent the flabby Irishman sprawling at the feet of the detective, who promptly sat on him and pinioned his arms behind him.

Richard Explains

"How dare you lay a finger upon this lady?" said Tryon Dunham, as he stepped to the side of his wife and put a strong arm about her, where she stood white and frightened in the doorway.

No one had noticed that the bell-boy had come to the head of the stairs and received a quiet order from the detective.

In sudden fear the discomfitted Richard arose and attempted to bluff the stranger who had so unwarrantedly interfered just as his fingers were about to close over the golden treasure of his cousin's fortune.

Kahn Says Boston Should Be Proud of Its Opera Company

Otto Kahn of New York, chairman of the board of directors of the Metropolitan Opera Company, vice-president of the Chicago Opera Company, and one of the directors of the Boston Opera Company, believes Boston should be proud of its opera house and its work. After attending the performance of "The Jewels of the Madonna," on his first visit to Boston this season, he said:

> Boston has every reason to be proud of her opera house, its large and diversified repertory and the general high plane of accomplishment here. I have heard many of the visiting artists speak most enthusiastically of the appreciative spirit of the Boston public.
> I believe heartily in opera written in English, although I do not as a rule favor translations.
> It is only in America that the public will support opera to a sufficient degree to warrant the production of opera in all languages.

Without An Operation

Wonderful Healing of Rupture.

How a New Jersey Man Got Rid of a Severe, Obstinate Right Inguinal Hernia Without the Slightest Trouble.

Below is a picture of Eugene M. Pullen, a well-known carpenter of Manasquan, New Jersey. If you could see him at his work, particularly when he handles heavy timber, jumps and climbs around like a youth, you would scarcely imagine that he had formerly been afflicted with a rupture.

Ruptured in Right Side.

At an early age, Eugene Pullen was an express driver. He handled railroad baggage. One day after delivering a heavy trunk on an upper floor he felt a pain in the right groin. The suffering increased and it was not long before the young man noticed the swelling.

The doctor told young Pullen that he was ruptured and that he must either wear a truss throughout life or submit to a drastic operation. All surgeons know that hernia operations, with anaesthetics, etc., are dangerous; they may end fatally. Moreover, it is a well established fact that many rupture operations are not successful; the bowel soon breaks through the sewed-up opening and protrudes worse than ever.

Afraid of Operation.

Like most others, Mr. Pullen declined to take the risks of an operation; the expense and loss of time had to be considered, too. Hoping he might get a little better encouragement, he went to another physician, who, to his sorrow, gave him even less hope. It was pointed out to the young man that unless the rupture were perfectly held all the time or the surgeon's knife successfully used, he might expect an increase or doubling in the rupture, with further complications, or the dreaded strangulated hernia which kills so many ruptured people.

Victim of Trusses.

The victim bought a truss, a hard, spring-like affair, the best he could get. It tortured him. He tried another—still no relief. He was compelled to give up his express business. The hard tasks of ordinary men were forbidden him. He became an insurance agent, in which position he did not need to do bodily work.

For six years Mr. Pullen dragged around, using various trusses, hard, elastic, etc., with never any contentment. One day his mother told him something she had just found out. It was a simple and easy thing for him to do. He lost no time.

Discarded His Truss.

Relief came at once; he almost forgot that he had any rupture. Afterward came a cure—a complete healing—and, although years have passed and Mr. Pullen is an energetic carpenter, working on buildings, climbing over roofs, lifting lumber and such like, he is absolutely free from the old hernia. He knows he is completely, lastingly cured. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble—comfort and contentment from the very outset. He is a strong, cheerful-minded man.

Valuable Information Free.

The valuable information which Mrs. Pullen read in a newspaper many years ago and gave to her son, together with further important facts, will be sent free to any reader of this who writes to Eugene M. Pullen, 45 Marcellus avenue, Manasquan, N. J., enclosing a stamp, for reply. Mention the kind of rupture you have, whether on right or left side, and what you have already done in your effort to cure it. A legion of cases of all kinds of rupture in men and women, including inguinal (groin), femoral, navel, scrotal, etc., have been reported completely healed. Age seems to make no difference.

GREAT BOSTON AUTO SHOW TO OPEN·TONIGHT

By J. C. KERRISON.

The greatest industrial exhibition that has ever been held in these United States will be inaugurated when the doors of Mechanics Building are opened this evening on the eleventh annual motor show of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association. This show, coming as it does at the close of the show circuit, brings into Boston the best of all there is in the motor world, not only in motor vehicles but in the kindred industries.

It is truly an exhibition that is worthy of inspection. It teaches a lesson in the progress of the engineers of America. It is educational to a degree and contains something of interest to every man and woman.

The latest in motor cars shows much improvement over a year ago, yet the visitor to the automobile show will not find any startling innovations. The trend of the trade has been towards refinements, greater luxury and easier operation.

The self-starting device, of course, is the big feature. There will be a great many more of them this year than were seen a year ago; in fact, the great majority of cars at the show are equipped with some sort of a self-starting device, the electric starter predominating.

Great strides have been made in body building and a glance at the automobile show will prove that the motorist of today is as particular about his automobile as he is about fine furniture or rare china.

The accessory man has put his best foot forward and there are a hundred and one devices that all tend to make the car easier to operate and give greater comfort to the motorist.

The time manufacturer is making a big display. All the well-known tire firms have space at the show and many types of tires will be exhibited.

As usual the decorations will be artistic and novel. The scheme this year is from the Babylonian period and those who ought to know, say it will excel anything that the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association has attempted in this line.

To a man in the trade the automobile show means more than merely an exhibition of cars. It is an annual reunion of the 'big fellows" in the industry. The factory salesmanagers, engineers, manufacturers and advertising men have come here from all of the big automobile centres of the country.

Among those recently arrived are J. A. Harris, advertising manager of the White Company, and his retinue, including Millard Newton and Walter Pietsch; Clyde S. Thompson, advertising manager of the Diamond tire, Mr. Rankin of the Mahin agency, E. S. Jordan, secretary of the Thomas B. Jeffery Company, and R. C. Chase of the Packard.

Mr. Thompson, who arrived yesterday, was at the Chicago show. He was elected and initiated into the Red Rooster Advertising organization, composed of 100 leading advertisers of America and England. Only men who excel in their respective lines are eligible to membership. Mr. Thompson's recent remarkable work in advertising Diamond Tires entitled him to this recognition. There will be a meeting of the Red Rooster here during the coming week.

William H. Rankin, vice-president of the Mahin Advertising Company, who handles the Goodrich and Diamond Tires, is with Mr. Thompson. Mr. Rankin is a member of the board of governors of the Red Roosters.

Consumption

The New Sartolin Method Offers Relief with Addition of Certain Advantages Over All Other Methods of Treatment

ITS BEST RECOMMENDATION:
NOT A LIFE WAS LOST

The Berlin Medical Association made an official test of SARTOLIN on the worst cases of consumption. Its report can be had for the asking—write for it. It makes inspiring reading for anxious people.

In many cases, the cough, night sweats, expectoration, headache, nervousness and stomach disturbances were overcome in two to four weeks, and though the cases selected were judged as very serious (many hopeless) not one life was lost!

In their place was substituted a ravenous and exhilarating appetite, undisturbed, refreshing sleep, and the strength and energy to labor. Think of sending men and women who had been given up to die back to work.

These results were secured, not on picked cases, but for some of this world's neediest sufferers. Furthermore, they were obtained without the use of any injections, opiates or internal medicine—a remarkable achievement, as any physician will tell you. Ask yours. And not a single individual was sent to a sanitarium, or made to change his or her mode of life in any material respect. They were simply given Sartolin to use, as you can use it, at home.

The official account described above shows Sartolin to be not only a very quick acting and powerful restorative, but also a most convenient, safe and pleasant method of treatment. It also positively protects the associates of the sufferer from all danger of infection. This fact without any further evidence sufficiently demonstrates its anti-tubercular virtues, and should inspire all sufferers with any form of serious lung trouble to know more about it. These particulars may be obtained, sent sealed and prepaid, on request. Get them and circulate the established facts. SARTOLIN, (Inc.) Dept. 402 B, 208 N. 5th Ave., Chicago.

MISS MABELLE E. HOCHLANDER of Wilkesbarre, Pa., whose engagement to Malcolm R. D. Wallace of Melrose has just been announced.

Society in two States is interested in the announcement of the engagement made today of Miss Mabelle Esther Hochlander of Wilkesbarre, Pa., to Malcolm Roderick Dhu Wallace of Melrose. The wedding is to take place early in the Spring.

The bride-to-be is one of the best known musicians in Wilkesbarre, where she has gained a wide reputation for her skill on the piano. Mr. Wallace is also prominent in the musical world, being a talented violinist and orchestra leader. He is the son of Mrs. Jennie Rippard Wallace of Wilkesbarre, well known in the musical life of that city.

TODAY'S LATE CABLE NEWS

Believe Morse Is on Way to America.

LONDON—Charles W. Morse has slipped quietly out of London and is believed to be aboard the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, which sailed for New York. His name does not appear on the passenger list, and the Hamburg-American officials state they have no knowledge of his booking a passage. The probability is that he sails under another name to avoid notoriety. During his stay in London he declined to be interviewed.

Hundreds Hurt in Funeral Riot.

BERLIN—Hundreds of persons were injured in a riot at the funeral of Rudolf Plunz, a Berlin jeweller, and Mrs. Plunz, who were almost beheaded by robbers on March 2.

Morbid curisity drew a huge crowd, consisting mostly of women and children to the cemetery. The women were very hysterical and when the police tried to prevent them from entering the crowd rushed the officers and swarmed into the graveyard.

In the riot that followed many women and children were trampled under foot.

Wants to Be "Lady Churchill."

LONDON—After Mrs. George Cornwallis West gets her divorce she wants to be known as Lady Randolph Churchill. She can formally resume her first husband's name by a declaration legally known as a deed poll, but this is not considered necessary, as it is thought that her wish will be respected if she merely lets it be known that she has resumed her former style and title.

Kaiser Touched by War Tax.

BERLIN—It will cost Emperor William $8,000,000 if the government bill to increase the German army becomes law. He and his subordinate sovereigns and princes are now exempt from taxation, but the new measure makes them all bear their share of the financial burden. It is reckoned that they will be assessed almost one-fifth of the $250,000,000 the bill calls for.

Payne Whitney in London Again.

LONDON— Mr. Henry Payne Whitney, who has been entertaining friends hunting at Mowbray for the last six weeks, has returned to London. The party included Mr. A. S. Burden, Mrs. James Burden, Mrs. A. S. Alexander, Miss Barbara Waltney and Mr. J. M. Waterbury. All are leaving for New York aboard the George Washington on Sunday.

DR. THOMAS, THAWING AUTO, BADLY BURNED

Enveloped in a sheet of flame and burning like a torch, Dr. Carlton R. Thomas of Dorchester, thirty-five years old, of No. 67 Minot street, running wildly about seeking help, was terribly burned today before ex-Police Lieutenant William F. Perry and Clifton Gould, neighbors, threw him to the ground and extinguished the fire. He was rushed to the City Hospital in the auto ambulance, where it is reported his powerful constitution may save him.

Dr. Thomas went into the garage at the rear of his house about 8 o'clock to respond to a call. He found the pipes in his big touring car frozen. While trying to thaw them the gasoline exploded and his clothes caught fire. The garage and the car were destroyed.

The physician ran around the grounds calling for help, but no one came. He rushed over to the piazza of Lieutenant Perry and tried to open the door. Instead of ringing the bell, he rushed away again. Perry, however, saw him from the window, and started in persuit, as did Clifton Gould, who was passing. After a hard chase they caught him and threw him to the ground. His wife came out to help and was burned about the hands trying to beat out the flames.

Dr. Thomas is widely known in Dorchester. Mrs. Thomas, who was ill, is prostrated. The loss on the auto and garage amounts to more than $3,000. Box 58, a new one, was sounded and it was some time before people could locate the blaze.

TUFTS HAS BIG SQUAD OUT FOR BASEBALL TEAM

The Tufts College baseball squad, numbering about forty men, have been working out daily in the baseball cage in the Goddard Gymnasium under the guidance of Coach Cannell. The coach is very much pleased with the material on hand and predicts that Tufts will have a team which will give all the colleges in the East a run for their money. It will be his policy to produce a good batting team in which department it formerly had been weak.

No cut in the squad has been made up to date and it is doubtful if any is made until the men have had a chance to work outdoors. Everything now points to a fast infield, both in batting and in fielding. Captain William J. Bennett is in fine shape and will, of course, be a fixture at first base. Stafford, the former Dean captain, who showed up so well last Fall in the sophomore-freshmen game, may be lost to the team because of an injury to his back.

In that case Lee, the varsity second baseman, will probably return to his old position and leave the twirling to the men now out for pitcher. Proctor, last year's shortstop is one of the best fielders that Tufts has had for years, but he is very weak with the stick. Should he be able to improve this he will be sure of a berth in the infield.

Third base is the only position which is extremely doubtful. Qualters, who played the position last year, has been lost by graduation. O'Brien, who played with Holy Cross formerly, and Armstrong, the Rindge athlete, are out for the position.

Marzynski, the varsity rightfielder of last year's team, is the only man who is reasonably sure of a berth this year. The other leading candidates for the outer garden are Godfrey, Brown, Heffern, Hall, Priest, Angell, Hill and C. Lee.

B. A. A. Seven Is Out to Win from Frontenac Team

The Frontenac hockey team of Kingston, Ont., which showed so splendidly here Thursday night against the Pilgrim A. A. seven, will play the Boston Athletic Association team tonight at the Boston Arena.

The contest promises to be most interesting and exciting, for the Frontenacs, in their Thursday night's exhibition, showed better than most of the Canadian teams which have visited Boston this season, and they have expressed confidence in their ability to defeat the wearers of the unicorn.

The Canadians play a clean, hard game, and their style is likely to give the B. A. A. team considerable bother. They are good skaters, and their similarity of play to that of B. A. A. will force the local seven to extend themselves to the limit.

BAY STATE PLAYERS QUALIFY IN GOLF TOURNEY IN SOUTH

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 8.—Only two Massachusetts golfers landed in the championship fight of the annual Florida amateur golf tournament here, H. P. Farrington, Woodland, with a 75 and John Shepard, Jr., Belmont, with 86, were these two players.

Walter Fairbanks, Denver, led the field with a 71, and captured the gold medal offered for the low score. G. Mason, Tuxedo, with a 74, was second and Farrington was next with a 75. W. S. Stafford, National, who withdrew from the match play, was 76, and R. H. McElwee, Onwentsia, the present Florida champion, and D. R. McLennan, Chicago, were the only other players, with cards of 77.

McFarland After Lightweight Title

Chicago Wizard Outclasses Britton

NEW YORK, March 8.—Packey McFarland, the wonderful Chicago boxer, who defeated Jack Britton so decisively in their ten-round bout in Madison Square Garden last night, declared today that he will not rest content until he has annexed the lightweight championship of the world. He stated that he is now ready and eager to talk business with Willie Ritchie, the 'Frisco lad who won the lightweight championship by his great victory over Ad Wolgast.

Packey was unmarked after his battle with Britton. In that "go" he proved that he is, indeed, the wizard of the ring and that he is without a peer at 138-140 pounds. Packey, however, will have to make lower weight for Ritchie.

Packey Is After Title.

Billy Gibson, manager of Madison Square Garden, is already dickering for a McFarland-Ritchie match. If this contest is arranged, the weight will probably be 135 pounds at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Packey said today:

> I beat Britton soundly as I said I would. I am now out for the lightweight championship and will make any reasonable weight for Ritchie. Willie is a great boxer but I am sure that I will be able to defeat him as I have the rest of the "headliners."

The bout last night was one of the most brilliant affairs ever staged in a New York ring. McFarland and Britton both put up wonderful battles and for a display of ring skill the contest has hardly ever been surpassed. Packey, however, was complete master of the situation and had a big lead in almost every round.

Big Lead for McFarland.

In only two sessions was Britton able to split the honors with his adversary. Throughout the greater part of the bout the milling was all in McFarland's favor. Both were on their feet and fighting fast at the last bell.

Neither lad scored a clean knockdown. The nearest semblance to this sort of treatment was gained by McFarland in the tenth round, when he half pushed and half knocked Jack through the ropes. Later, after Jack was doubled up, Packy sent him to one knee. But neither punch was able to send Jack to the mat.

There was a good deal of betting on the result, with McFarland the favorite at 100 to 70, at which price several large wagers were made between the time when the men weighed in, at 3 o'clock, and the hour they entered the ring, the prevailing odds then being 7 to 5 on McFarland.

Fight by Rounds

Round One.

The great crowd was still anxious when the gong brought the men up for the first round. Britton led with a short left for the body as Packey stepped back. McFarland crowded him to the ropes and made him clinch with two swings on the neck. McFarland again led with a fast left and Britton broke ground to the ropes.

McFarland rushed, Britton clinching and accidentally using a kidney blow. Britton met another rush with a left, and McFarland, crowding him, put a right into the body. Packey kept up his attack, Britton blocking and clinching, with now and then a counter. McFarland stopped a left and ran into another clinch. He did practically all the leading and took the round.

Round Two.

McFarland jumped out of his corner for the second round. Britton clinched as Packey led, and then Jack missed two hard swings for the head. McFarland worked into a clinch and Britton appealed to the referee. The crowd howled him down and urged McFarland to go in for all he was worth. Britton missed again and clinched. McFarland rushed. Britton backed to a corner. McFarland rushed into a clinch and followed left to face. Britton mixed, but soon was holding as Packey slashed him. McFarland's round on aggressiveness and blows landed.

Round Three.

Britton grinned as he faced the stock yards boxer for a third round. As McFarland rushed Britton cut loose with rapid hooks which landed squarely in Packey's face. Britton tried rushing and McFarland rocked him with a great righthander on the ear, but Britton recovered in a jiffy and ran into a mix. Britton cut loose at close quarters, then packed ribroasters in rapid succession. He came again and Packey staggered him with a left on the jaw. McFarland followed with a rush and Britton clinched. Packey blocked several light lefts and crowded his man to the ropes. In the middle of the ring Britton had the better of a rapid exchange and got an even break on the round.

Round Four.

Having shown an improvement that encouraged his friends, Britton began the fourth round with renewed confidence. His leads were stopped, however, and McFarland stung him in the nose and mouth with fast lefts. Britton broke ground, clinched and missed until McFarland decided to crowd him when Britton received a hard left on the jaw that almost put him down. Britton rallied with a desperate attack and quickly had McFarland on the defensive. He rained lefts and rights on Packey's neck and jaw until McFarland, cutting loose with a terrific right-hand swing, almost [illegible] Britton down, but Britton came back with another great onslaught and took the round.

Round Five.

McFarland shot a left to the nose as a starter in the fifth round. Britton broke ground to avoid a rush, but he came back quickly and punched McFarland in the body with three lefts. McFarland measured him for a left to the jaw and Britton clinched. Packey was after him with another hot left in the face and right in the ribs. Britton coverd up to escape dangerous hooks and McFarland caught him going away with a left swing. McFarland forced it hard and Britton held until ordered to break. McFarland was the aggressor to the bell for the round. Britton slowed up perceptibly.

Round Six.

Two hard lefts on the neck by McFarland put Britton on the defensive in the sixth round, Packey landing five more clean lefts in the face and Britton began to duck. McFarland again planted a stiff left on the mouth and Jack clinched. Britton missed the two wild swings and McFarland rocked him with left and right to the head. Britton mixed up fiercely and tackled with both hands. He (Packey) covered up at long range and landed more clean lefts in the face. It was McFarland's round on the cleanest kind of points, and the crowd cheered.

Round Seven.

Britton put a clean left on the nose in the seventh round and went in to mix it. Packey met him with a tremendous right on the neck and Britton tumbled back sideways to the ropes. Packey was after him quickly but Jack was on the defensive and would not open up. McFarland followed him to a corner and then along the ropes driving in swift lefts to the head and right-handers to the body continually, now and then, trying a wild swing while Packey forced it, jabbing, hooking and swinging with ease. Britton was swinging wildly at the gong. McFarland's round.

Round Eight.

A corking left on the point of the jaw staggered Britton as the eighth round opened. He tried boxing at long range, but his blows had very little steam. McFarland sidestepped and kept up the left hand work without taking a breathing spell. Another quick left sent Britton's head back with a jerk and Packey ran into a clinch. They separated and became locked again. Britton tried more long range work but did no harm. McFarland, getting closer, shook him with a left hook and then stood away until the bell rang. McFarland's round.

Round Nine.

As Britton came up for the ninth round McFarland staggered him with a great left-hand swing on the jaw. Packey rushed in with two more lefts and Britton hugged. He tried several ineffective lefts which Packey blocked easily and then received a left hook on the jaw. In a mix Britton landed a right-hand cross counter that drew blood from McFarland's nose, but Packey also brough the claret from Jack's mouth. In another mix McFarland sent home a staggering right on the neck and Britton put a punch over the heart. McFarland's round.

Round Ten.

McFarland was the winner. They shook hands for the tenth and last round and ran into a mixup. McFarland landed a heavy left, and Britton losing his balance fell on the ropes. Britton came back, with a rush and into a mix. McFarland made him reel with a left between the eyes. Britton went into another mix and McFarland blocked him. Packey rushed and Jack received a staggering wallop on the neck. Still Britton was willing to mix, but McFarland outslugged him. Britton slipped down but was up, missing wild swings for the head. McFarland took the round and shook hands cordially with his opponent. McFarland was the winner.

English High and Lowell Clash in Games on Track

The Boston English High track team will go to Lowell today to clash with the High School track team of that city. This will be the final set of games for the Blue and Blue athletes before they compete for the city of Boston championships next Saturday at the regimental games.

Captain Irving Howe will take his strongest team to Lowell and hopes to win the meet by a large margin. English has some sterling track performers and the Lowell boys will have to work hard in order to make a good showing.

CORKRAN AND FOWNES IN FINAL MATCH

PINEHURST, N. C., March 8.—B. Warren Cockran of Baltimore won an exciting match from John E. Porter, Pittsburgh, in the semi-final round of the ninth annual Spring golf tournament here. The match went three extra holes, Cockran gaining the necessary stroke on the twenty-first. In the 36-hole final today Cockran will meet William C. Fownes, Jr. Fownes won yesterday's match with Robert Hunter of Weeburn, 4 up and 3 to play.

BOSTON CHESS CLUB PLANS EXHIBITION

The Boston Chess Club has arranged a series of entertainments to be held on Saturday evenings in the rooms at No. 15 Exchange street. This evening a simultaneous exhibition will be given by H. B. Daly, who is now tied for the championship of the club with G. L. Cabot and H. L. Perrin, as a result of the annual tournament which has just been played.

JAKE MORSE RESIGNS FROM N. E. LEAGUE

Secretary J. C. Morse of the New England baseball league has resigned. Mr. Morse has been secretary of the league for fifteen years. Increasing demands of his private business is stated to be the cause of his resignation. The vacancy will be filled at the meeting of the league next week, when additional schedule dates will be announced.

ROXBURY LATIN IS WINNER OF MEET

Roxbury Latin Schools track and field athletes won the triangular meeting with Boston Latin and Cambridge High and Latin in the Boston Latin drill hall, Warren avenue, yesterday afternoon. The Highlanders' total was 24 points, Boston Latin scored 22 points and Cambridge High and Latin 17 points.

Sullivan Selected to Coach Melrose Baseball Squad

Eugene Sullivan, the former New England League player, has been appointed coach of the Melrose High baseball team for this season. Sullivan coached Peabody High last season and proved a success, and the boys at Melrose are elated over his appointment.

Sullivan will have some good material to work with, and he hopes to develop a team that will finish well up in the Suburban League. Ross, who made such a fine showing on the mound the early part of last season, is again available, and he should be a much improved pitcher this year. Battery candidates will be called out for first work in the High School gymnasium on Monday.

BOWLING MARK IS MADE AT TOLEDO

TOLEDO, O., March 8.—Another American Bowling Congress record was established when Louis Heubner of Chicago, rolling in the individuals, scored 287 in his first game. This surpasses the former record of 280, held by L. Vellstick of Kansas City and made at the tournament in Chicago in 1912.

WIN FOR HARVARD.

NEW YORK, March 8.—In the first round of the annual series of team chess matches between the Harvard Club and the Yale Club, contested in the clubhouse of the former, the Harvard graduates proved victorious, 3½ to 1½.

'Young' M'Donough Beats Dohan in Bout at Lowell

LOWELL, March 8.—In a whirlwind twelve-round bout at the Lowell A. C. "Young" McDonough of Manchester, N. H., got the decision over Johnny Dohan of Brooklyn, N. Y. McDonough did most of the leading for nine rounds, chopping over Dohan's ear, and his repeated uppercuts staggered the Brooklyn lad.

Dohan's most effective work was left-hand jabs over McDonough's right eye and some terrific punches in the stomach. In the last three rounds there was the finest exhibition of infighting ever given in this city.

In the twelfth round, McDonough, after receiving one of Dohan's heavy punches, was either knocked off his pins or slipped. He rallied, however, and both men were gamely fighting when the gong sounded.

The bout was one of the best ever staged in this city.

"Kid" Lee of Chelsea and "Young" Morgan of Manchester, N. H., gave a fine exhibition of sparring and the decision was awarded "Young" Morgan.

Harry Burns of Lawrence got the decision on Phinney Boyle of Lowell, and "Young" Hamilton and "Young" Calvin fought a draw of six rounds.

HARVARD TEAM IN OPENING TOURNEY

Harvard is represented at the preliminaries of the intercollegiate fencing tournament now being held in New York by its regular varsity team, made up of S. F. Damon, '14, of Newton; J. A. Aylen, '15, of Ottawa, Can.; Robert von Nardroff, '15, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Tracy J. Putnam, '15, of Boston. The finals of the fencing tournament are to be held in the Hotel Astor, New York, on March 21 and 22.

GERMANS PLAN NEW OLYMPIC RULING

BERLIN, March 8.—The German Olympic authorities who are in charge of the arrangements for the next Olympic games in 1916, have decided, subject to the confirmation of the international committee, to eliminate from the Berlin program the shot-putting and discus and javelin-throwing with both hands and to return to the old method by which the competitor was allowed to use his best hand.

HARVARD SOCCER MEN IN FIRST CLASH

Harvard will meet Lynn Posse soccer team this afternoon on Soldiers Field. This is the first game of the season, and, although there are but six men left from last year's team, the outlook is bright, as much new and fast material has been developed by Captain E. L. Barron and Coach Burgess in the last few weeks.

NEWTON PICKED TO WIN HOCKEY GAME AT ARENA

The hockey teams of Medford High and Newton High will clash this afternoon at the Arena. Newton is a big favorite and is expected to win by a comfortable margin. Newton has a very good hockey team this season and has made a fine record.

This is the last game on the schedule for Medford and the boys are anxious to win. The cold weather of the past few days has given them ice to practice on and the boys will go into the contest in the best of condition. The Medford players are capable of putting up a hard contest, but the team has not displayed much team work this season.

Newton High has many clever players in its lineup, including Forte, Spalding and Wellman. Forte and Spalding are playing in the forward line and have put up a fast game all season. Archie Wellman is goal tender and ranks among the best.

WESLEYAN ARRANGES TENNIS CONTESTS

MIDDLETOWN, March 8.—Wesleyan's program of tennis matches for this season has been approved by the athletic council. The schedule presented by Manager R. S. Gibbs, '13 of Belvidere, N. J., is as follows: April 24, Columbia at New York; April 25, Princeton at Princeton; April 26, Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; April 30, Yale at Middletown; May 3, Trinity at Hartford; May 10, Brown at Middletown; May 15, Cornell at Middletown; May 17, Y. M. C. A. College at Springfield; May 19, 22, N. E. I. T. A. at Boston; May 23, Dartmouth at Hanover; May 24, Amherst at Amherst.

AUSTRALIA SELECTS CHALLENGE TEAM

SYDNEY, N. S. W., March 8.—The Lawn Tennis Association has selected Anthony F. Wilding, S. N. Doust and Mr. Jones as the Australian players to compete in the preliminary matches for the selection of a challenging team for the Dwight F. Davis lawn tennis trophy. The trophy is held by England. Norman E. Brookes, the veteran player, will not be able to make the trip this year with the Australian team.

Collins Signs Contract With Red Sox Team

In a letter received at the Red Sox headquarters, after President McAleer and the Red Sox party had started for Hot Springs, Ray Collins, the southpaw pitcher and the only player on the roster of the world's champions who had not come to terms with the club, stated that he would accept the terms offered by President McAleer, and would start for Hot Springs within a day or two.

Collins had, he said, a few things to attend to in Burlington, Vt., but as soon as he could clean these up he would be on his way.

It was a very fair letter. Ray said that he had expected to receive more money than the contract called for. He hoped, he said, that he would be able to work the coming season so successfully that the club management would see its way clear to increase his salary.

Bill Carrigan is one of the busiest men in the camp at Hot Springs. Bill is not only working hard to get himself into proper condition for a hard season, but he is coaching the squad of recruit pitchers that Manager Jake Stahl has at Hot Springs.

Carrigan is a very steady catcher and as a coach to young pitchers he is a high-class man to the Red Sox. Carrigan signals to his men and holds up his big mitt and he is training his pitchers to put that ball just where he wants it.

TIGER DIVER HURT; OUT OF MEET TODAY

PRINCETON, N. J., March 8.—A serious accident to Thomas B. Brazleton, '15, fancy diver on the Princeton swimming team, will greatly handicap the Tigers in the intercollegiate meet here today. He became unconscious when he came down head first on the springboard after completing a splendid turn in mid-air. The doctors feared a fatal injury, but later developments have shown no internal injury, and it is hoped that he will recover within a few weeks.

Pilgrims Have Double-Header Not Baseball; Only Game of Eats

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

ATHENS, Ga., March 8.—At the hotel here the order of meals is breakfast, dinner, supper, with dinner in the middle of the day, not at the more fashionable evening hour. Stallings conceived the idea it would be better for his players to be served with a luncheon at mid-day, reserving the heavier meal for the evening, when practice is over for the day.

So he made arrangements with Proprietor O'Callaghan to have luncheon served the ball players at noon and dinner at night, both meals being served the players half an hour before the regular guests of the hotel would be admitted to the dining room. Note the result.

The boys had their luncheon on time and hurried to the ball field. Promptly at 6 o'clock at night they lined up at the dining room door again and were seated at their tables five seconds after the dignified colored head waiter let down the portcullis.

MARANVILLE LEADER IN BIG RAID.

Starting in with soup, the players went through the score card without missing a fish, an entree, a roast or a vegetable, and wound up with ice cream and coffee. By that time the supper hour for the regular guests of the hotel had arrived, and the doors of the dining room were thrown open for their reception. Supper score cards were placed on all the tables. The players picked them up. They had just finished their dinner and were daintily using the "thumb tubs," as the finger bowls are called.

"This looks pretty good to me," declared "Rabbit" Maranville, scanning the bill of fare. He turned to the waiter.

"George," he said, "bring me some of that soup and some tenderloin steak and some bacon and some ham omelette and some fried potatoes and some hot biscuits and some preserved pears and some coffee and some griddle cakes. Don't forget the griddle cakes."

George reeled, but recovered himself and murmured:

"Yas, sah."

The other players took the cue and in an incredibly short space of time every member of the squad had tucked a full-sized supper on top of a Brobdignagian dinner. When the news was broken to Proprietor O'Callaghan, it was feared for a moment that an ambulance would have to be summoned. Stallings had taken an early train for his plantation at Haddock, Ga., and doesn't yet know of the havoc created in the dining room by his Pilgrims.

Secretary Nickerson has it in for the ticket agent at Bedford, Ind., wherever that is. All that is known of the place is that it is the Winter home of Catcher Bill Rariden. When orders were sent to the players under reserve instructing them to report for Spring training, arrangements were made with the railroad companies whereby transportation from the players' homes to Athens were to be furnished the players at the expense of the club, but only when the signed contract of the player was delivered into the hands of the ticket agent. This was to prevent a player getting free training before he had signed a contract.

This method smoked out every player except one, and that one was Bill Rariden. By some means Bill hoodwinked the ticket agent at Bedford, Ind., into forking over the transportation, and the result was that Bill arrived at Athens with his unsigned contract in his pocket. He was very independent for twenty-four hours, and talked big about not signing until the club came to his terms.

But after getting a look at the husky candidates for the backstop position on the club and hearing that two of the best candidates were on their way, he sneaked to the writing room and made haste to affix his signature to the contract. But that doesn't let the ticket agent at Bedford, Ind., out. Secretary Nickerson has given an order for a shot-gun and at the first opportunity he is going gunning for said ticket agent. Thus fail the contributions to the gaiety of nations.

The training days roll by and the soreness of the players roils off. Except for recent arrivals, like Hap Myers and Bert Whaling, all the boys have reached the training stage where they enjoy the practice. Later the grind will begin to wear on them and they will begin to growl like deep water sailors growl over the grub provided them. But just now it is good fun for the boys. The rivalry for nearly every position on the team is intense and that keeps the players on the hop.

With three candidates for first base and half a dozen men who hope to win out at shortstop or third base, to say nothing of six catchers and ten pitchers, it is a poor time to lag behind, even if any of the rivals felt like it. The contrary is the case, however. All hands are full of pepper. The big men of the squad, like Metz and Schultz and Smith, who were slower that some of the little fellows like Maranville in working out the soreness are now showing what is in them.

BRIEF SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

By RILEY

SIR THOMAS LIPTON performed a great service for his old friend, Johnny Fitzgerald, when he challenged for another whack at the America cup at this particular time. Just as we were about to take a long, deep plunge into baseball for the next six months, our attention is distracted by Sir Thomas' demand for a yacht race, and this distraction is the service which Lipton's challenge does the Mayor of Boston.

* * *

WHEN Johnny Fitz took the centre of the stage in the world's championship baseball series last Fall, there occurred an accident that peeved our "live wire" executive intensely. The royal rooters, whom he had led with great eclat to and from Boston and New York for six games, were excluded from their seats at Fenway Park on the seventh day. Therefore, in disgust at such cavalier treatment of the Boston shouters, Mayor Fitz demanded the head of Secretary Bob McRoy of the Red Sox, threatening as an alternative a campaign for more twenty-five cents seats at the theatre of the world champions. This, notwithstanding the Sox magnates, taking quick notice of the mistake, had promptly and publicly apologized to the royal rooters and their esteemed leader, the Mayor.

NOW there was no chance for the Mayor, or anybody else to get the head of McRoy, by simply demanding it; first, because the Sox Secretary is under contract; and second, because he is a part owner of the club. Might as well try to oust the bosses of a bank without due process of law. Nor was there any more chance to compel the Red Sox to play twenty-five cent baseball by official ukase than to require the banks to loan their money to all comers at one per cent. per century. All the Mayor had up his sleeve was the possible power of public opinion as it might be aroused through the newspapers.

THAT is where Sir Thomas Lipton's challenge comes in. The Red Sox will not now monopolize public interest in sports. Public opinion will be as much divided between Uncle Sam and John Bull as it was between Red Sox and Giants. We will listen to yachting "dope" for the next year or two and we fear our readers will be quite as much excited over a luff as they used to be over a bunt, a jibe as a double steal and "heave Ho, my hearty," will be as thrilling as "hit 'er out" was. Also a new crop of sporting writers have come into existence since the last cup race of ten years ago.

* * *

LIPTON undertakes once more to send over such a boat. He has put the New York Yacht Club fairly in a hole. They will have to accept this challenge if it is unqualified, as we understand it is, or surrender the cup without a struggle.

Red Sox Anxious for Real Game Entire Squad at Work Monday

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 8.—In twenty-four hours' time the whole Boston team will be in the Spa. Secretary Eddie Riley left Boston yesterday with Players Gardner, Wagner, Yerkes, Ball, Janvrin and Carlstrom, old Charley Farrell, who is to aid Manager Stahl, and his four catchers in finding out just who's who and what's what with the team's flock of pitching rookies, four sport critics and Bugs Joe Burns and Mike McDonough.

The remaining regular members of the world's champions, the youths who live in the middle West, far West and Southwest, will come in singles, places and trips, and if some of the athletes do not become lost on the road a la Dutch Leonard and Grover Brant, Stahl will have a full family on deck at the Eastman Hotel by supper time tomorrow evening.

PIRATES REACH HOT SPRINGS MONDAY.

In passing it might be mentioned that Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, the other big league outfit that trains in Hot Springs, will have his warriors in the Spa by Monday morning. Originally Fred Clarke planned remaining in West Baden until the middle of the coming week with his athletes and not reaching this fair city until next Friday. But miserable weather over in the Indiana resort town has caused a switch in Pittsburgh's plans, and the Pirates are to reach the Eastman Monday.

It can be added that the big reason Clarke is arriving ahead of scheduled time with his team is because he has got next to Stahl's curves and does not want to have his team caught napping in the big local series.

Stahl to Use Youngsters.

Of course, the Boston-Pittsburgh series won't spell anything. Just the same neither team wants to land the loser. Stahl brought his pitchers and catchers here a week in advance of the regulars so as to have them in the pink of trim for the forthcoming tiffs with the Pirates. It is Sir Jacob's intention to give his young pitchers plenty of work in the games.

He well appreciates the fact that Clarke commands a strong team and one that knows how to belt the ball. Hence, if Watkins, Martina, Ainsworth, Moseley, Leonard, Brant and Foster go good and look good in the scraps with the National Leaguers, Stahl will know that he possesses some unusually fine slab talent, then, if their deliveries get whacked to the three corners of Whittington Park, the Boston skipper can arrange to do some planting.

When the regulars come to town, they are bound to find the youngsters in wonderfully good form. Leonard alone looks over weight and in reality, according to the testimony of Stahl, manager, and Quirk, trainer, Dutch is really not toting about much extra embonpoint. Leonard is just naturally growing big, Quirk declares, and Stahl puts his O. K. on the statement, and while Dutch is probably heavier by some fifteen or eighteen pounds than this time a year ago, the flesh is mainly of the good, old, honest sort. At that, Quirk made Leonard do some five or six laps around the fences of Majestic Park at the windup of yesterday's practice seance.

Weather Remains Good.

The weather remains glorious. It simply could not be any brighter and not much warmer. Tourists and natives alike are waiting for the morrow to come so that they can get a personal peep at Tris Speaker, Duffy Lewis, Larry Gardner, Captain Charley Wagner and the other beaneboro heroes.

MARQUARD TO REPORT TO GIANTS MARCH 20

NEW YORK, March 8.—According to advices received from Marlin, Tex., the New York National's training camp, Rube Marquard, the Giants' star left-handed pitcher who won nineteen straight games last Summer, will report to Manager McGraw in Marlin on March 20. McGraw has received assurances through a third party that Marquard will report to the Giants at the end of his theatrical engagement, which closes in Los Angeles at the end of next week.

Frank Cavanaugh Again to Coach Dartmouth Team

WORCESTER, March 8.—It was learned here today that Frank W. Cavanaugh, a local man, would coach the Dartmouth football team again next Fall. Cavanaugh has been spending the Winter in this city, but it was not until today that his plans were learned.

After the close of the last football season it was rumored that Coach Cavanaugh would resign, and a new coach would be appointed by the athletic committee.

Three assistant coaches to Cavanaugh were named. They are Walter Elcock of Dorchester, W. T. Englehorn of Spokane and Dave Morey of Malden. These three men have made names as Dartmouth football players. Englehorn was elected captain of the football team for next year, but resigned on account of the four-year rule. Englehorn was one of the best tackles developed last year and was chosen on many All-American teams. Dave Morey played halfback last sason.

CHORUS OF 'WHYS' GREET MYSTERIOUS EXIT OF THE LIQUOR LAW COMMITTEE

Members of the Legislature are much stirred by the charges of unfair treatment made against Senator Walter E. McLane of Fall River, the Republican chairman of the legislative Committee on Liquor Law.

The charges were made by Superintendent Arthur J. Davis of the Anti-Saloon League. Anti-saloon men are very much wroth over the whole affair which resulted in the transfer of all liquor bills to the Committee on Legal Affairs.

Superintendent Davis will not say what he means by the word "unfair" as used in his protest against Senator McLane. He made no specific explanation as to what this unfairness consists of nor would he do so when questioned.

A number of the anti-liquor men are not so reticent, however. They want their friends in the Legislature to ask an inquiry to ascertain what is meant by unfairnes, as charged by Superintendent Davis. They want witnesses summoned, lobbyists questioned and a full and sweeping probe made into the manner in which liquor legislation is handled on Beacon Hill by both sides.

Great Chorus of "Whys."

There is a great chorus of WHY? WHY? WHY? going up on Beacon Hill. Those who are anxious to have the whole matter cleared up say that an investigation might make plain many things which are now matters of gossip.

Coming so closely on the heels of the sensational charges of bribery made by Senator McDevitt of Quincy, who is a member of the Liquor Law Committee, and who, in his charges, mentioned a liquor bill, the discharge of the committee, which is without precedent in the history of the Massachusetts Legislature, has caused a stir almost as great as that occasioned by the McDevitt episode.

The Committee on Liquor Law, which is appointed to consider all bills for new liquor legislation, was discharged from further service by the presiding officers of the two legislative branches. A number of important bills in the committee's docket which had yet to receive consideration have been turned over to the Committee on Legal Affairs. The situation is without a parellel in the history of the State.

The discharge of the committee followed a protest made a week ago by Superintendent Arthur J. Davis of the Anti-Saloon League, representing the allied temperance societies, when he withdrew from the hearing before the committee. He announced that because of unfair and discourteous treatment by Senator Walter E. McLane of Fall River, the Republican chairman of the committee, his organization would make no further attempt to present their bills before the committee, but would conduct their campaigns through communications with the members of the Legislature.

Ask "What is Behind?"

To get its case before the people of the State, the Anti-Saloon League arranged a series of protest meetings which they intended to begin on March 16. Faneuil Hall was secured for a meeting on that date and other meetings were being arranged all over the State. As soon as this became known to President Greenwood and Speaker Cushing they discharged the committee.

This action and the fact that an arrangement has been made whereby another committee is to give hearings on the various bills advocated or opposed by the temperance people has resulted in the Anti-Saloon League calling off its proposed meetings of protest. This was done at the annual meeting of the League yesterday.

This Wife and Mother Wishes to Tell You FREE How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By All Means Write to Her and Learn How She Did It.

For over 20 years James Anderson of 106 Elm Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a very hard drinker. His case seemed a hopeless one, but 10 years ago his wife, in their own little home, gave him a simple remedy which, much to her delight, stopped his drinking entirely.

To make sure that the remedy was responsible for this happy result, she also tried it on her brother and several of her neighbors. It was successful in every case. None of them has touched a drop of intoxicating liquor since.

She now wishes everyone who has drunkenness in their homes to try this simple remedy, for she feels sure that it will do as much for others as it has for her. It can be given secretly if desired, and without cost she will gladly and willingly tell you what it is. All you have to do is write her a letter asking her how she cured her husband of drinking and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope. As she has nothing to sell, do not send her money. Simply send a letter with all confidence to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above, taking care to write your name and full address plainly. (We earnestly advise every one of our readers who wishes to cure a dear one of drunkenness to write to this lady to-day. Her offer is a sincere one.)

A TEN CENT BOX OF "CASCARETS"

Insures you for months Against Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Bad Stomach.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oils or purgative waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage or alimentary organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your inside organs pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

ETHEL BARRYMORE and her two lovely children, Samuel Barrymore Colt, aged three years and three months, and Ethel Barrymore Colt, aged eight months. The actress-mother says she would give up fame, fortune and friends, if necessary, but never, voluntarily, her children.

CONFIRM LOSS OF STEAMSHIP; 200 PERISHED

LONDON, Mar. 8.—Dispatches received here today confirm the earlier reports regarding the foundering of the British steamship Calvados, which went down in the Sea of Marmora in the course of a gale on March 1, resulting in the loss of 200 lives. The news was brought to Constantinople, whence today's dispatches were sent by officers of a steamship of another line, who reported weathering the same storm and observing plain evidences of the fate of the Calvados in the form of floating wreckage and lifeboats of the lost vessel. These officers report that although considerable time was devoted to an effort to find and rescue any survivors, there was no evidence that any escaped alive.

The storm that sent her to the bottom is described as of brief duration, but of almost unprecedented ferocity.

ELEVATED GIVES MORE TRANSFERS

The Boston Elevated is giving more transfers. Beginning today, it established a free transfer privilege between night cars at Central Square, Cambridge, from inward bound Harvard Square cars, to inward bond Prospect street, East Cambridge cars, and from outward-bound cars for Harvard Square.

ENDS UNSIGHTLY ITCHING HUMORS

Resinol for 18 Years a Success in Treating Eczema.

Thousands of people who for years hadn't really enjoyed a day's freedom from the torments of eczema, whose nights had been nightmares of itching and burning, and whose lives were made miserable by the embarrassing disfigurement, have had perfect skin health restored by Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, quickly, easily, and at little cost.

Where some treatments hardly afford a moment's relief, Resinol stops itching instantly and clears away the eruption for good and all. This is a simple statement of fact. You can prove its truth yourself at our expense. Send to Dept. 5-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a liberal trial of Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap free, by parcel post. Every druggist sells Resinol because doctors in every corner of the United States have prescribed it regularly for eighteen years

FOSS OPPOSES COMPROMISE ON UTILITIES

Governor Foss today served notice on the Legislature that he will not tolerate a compromise in his fight for a real public utilities board.

This notice came in form of a statement from the Governor's office today, containing this significant phrase:

The Governor feels that it would be particularly unfortunate at this time for the present Legislature to fail to recognize and comply fully with this public demand.

A sub-committe of the legislative committee on railroads has drafted a bill (published in yesterday's AMERICAN) providing for enlargement of the Railroad Commission to five members and giving the Commission the title of Transportation Commission.

The bill also provides for giving the new body mandatory powers in supervising railroad and steamship transportation and the telegraph and telephone companies.

The bill is a combination of some provisions of the Governor's Public Utilities bill and of the so-called "Washburn bill."

The Governor calls for a public utilities board to which shall be transferred all the powers now enjoyed by the Railroad, Highway, Gas and Electric light Commissions and the Boston Transit Commission. The bill proposed by the sub-committee of the Railroad Committee does not go that far. Hence the statement from the Governor's office today, as follows:

> It has been stated in the press, during the past day or two, that the Legislature will probably create a "Transportation Commission," possessing some of the added powers which the Governor has advocated; this commission to take the place of the present Railroad Commission.
> If these statements correctly represent the positio nof the Legislature at this time, the Governor wishes the public to know that he personally and officially advocates as strongly as ever the creation of a Public Utilities Commission, with broader powers, over a larger field, than the proposed Transportation Commission.
> Previous Legislatures having fr many years failed t comply with the growing public demand in Massachusetts for more powerful regulation of all private corporations which transact any public service business in the Commonwealth, the Governor feels that it would be particularly unfortunate at this time for the present Legislature to fail to recognize and comply fully with this public demand.

Boston Admirers Share Pride with Ethel Barrymore

Boston friends and admirers of Mrs. Ethel Barrymore Colt are discussing with interest today the testimony she has added to that of other women who have achieved fame in the theatre and in grand opera that "motherhood is the greatest career."

Mme. Schumann-Heink takes great pride in her large and happy family, and many an actress—Blanche Bates the latest—has been glad to leave the stage to darn socks. None of them, however, show more pride in their children than Ethel Barrymore Colt. Boston people, who recall her on the stage here and remember her marriage and honeymoon here, share in that pride.

Miss Barrymore says motherhood gives a woman on the stage a greater appreciation of life and a clearer interpretation of art, and that she would give up fame, fortune and friends, but never her children.

Her son, who is three years and three months old, has been named after his grandfather, Samuel P. Colt, and the girl, eight months old, bears the name of her mother, Ethel Barrymore Colt.

HERE'S OFFICIAL BOSTON SCHOOL BREAD RECIPE

When L. R. Anderson of Oregon asked 3,000 Boston school teachers in Tremont Temple if they could make good bread (WHITE bread), and the teachers all together answered "Yes," the question brought to the public mind was:

"What is the Boston school recipe for making white bread, anyhow? Do they all make it alike or does each teacher follow her own bread-mixing idea?"

The answer is that there is an official bread recipe, used in the domestic science department of the Boston public schools.

It is considered a good recipe, one that is tried and true. If carefully followed it should give good results every time.

The official recipe is two-fold. One formula is for "slow process," the other for "quick process." The recipe is the one recommended by Miss Josephine Morris, Supervisor of Household Science and Arts in the Boston school department, and is as follows:

Slow Process:

1. Ingredients: Two cups boiling water; 1 teaspoon sugar; 2 teaspoons salt; 2 tablespoons lard, butter or dripping; ¼ yeast cake mixed with ¼ cup lukewarm water; about 6 cups flour, or enough to make it of right consistency for kneading.

2. Operation: Put the boiling water, sugar, salt and shortening into a mixing bowl, and stir the mixture until the shortening is melted; break the yeast into bits and mix it with ¼ cup of lukewarm water, and when the liquid in the bowl is lukewarm add the yeast and stir in the flour gradually, using a knife or a wooden spoon

When the dough is stiff enough to make into a smooth ball, turn it out on the flour board and knead it until it is smooth and elastic. Then return contents to the bowl, cover it closely and let it rise in a warm place, about 75 degrees Fahrenheit, until it has doubled its bulk.

When it is ready, shake it into biscuits or loaves, place in greased pans, cover it and let it rise again to double its bulk. Bake in hot oven. The loaves require from 45 to 60 minutes; biscuits from 10 to 20 minutes; and intermediate sizes in proportion. When baked, remove from the pan and cool.

Milk may be used instead of water; but when milk is used, then half as much shortening is required.

Quick Process:

1. Ingredients: Either 2 cups of hot milk or one of hot milk and 1 of boiling water; 1 teaspoon salt; 1 teaspoon sugar; 1 yeast cake; mix with ¼ cup of lukewarm water; add flour to make it stiff enough to knead.

2. Operation: Follow the directions given in the slow process recipe, with the larger amount of yeast given in this process, and the bread should be completed in 5 or 6 hours.

So much is said about Boston brown bread, with inquiries coming from all over the country for an official Boston recipe, that white bread has received less publicity. But the question asked by Mr. Anderson of Oregon has brought the baking of white bread right to the front at this time.

"FRESNO DAN" RATHER LIKES BOSTON WOMEN

Fresno Dan, Dakota Dan's rival in the famous Russell will case, declares that he is not afraid of the women of Boston. He says he rather likes most of the women he has seen in Boston. Discussing the incident in the corridors of the Suffolk County Courthouse when he was tripped by two women, Fresno said:

> I am not afraid of the women of Boston. In fact I like them—that is most of them.
> Out in California I used to carry a gun. When I first came to Boston they thought that perhaps I ought to continue to carry one.
> But I guess I did not need a gun. Those women, the other day, who tripped me up, did not mean any harm. I don't need to carry a gun on that account.
> I didn't complain to Master Pevey, I did tell the lawyers about it, and I guess they were afraid—I wasn't. No gun for me. It would cost about $50 to carry a gun here—and get caught at it.

Fresno Dan appeared at the famous will trial only a short time before the hearing adjourned till next Wednesday. The courtroom was crowded to capacity. In fact two women had wrangled over a seat each sought after all the other settees had been taken. One of the women was reprimanded by Master Pevey. She was told to sit down or get out.

A little later Master Pevey stopped the hearing and sent both women from the courtroom. The one who was first admonished scarcely reached the corridor when she burst out crying.

Actress Tells Secret

A Well Known Actress Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair and Promoted Its Growth With a Simple Home-Made Mixture.

Miss Blanche Rose, a well-known actress, who darkened her gray hair with a simple preparation which she mixed at home, in a recent interview at Chicago, Ill., made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the required shade. This will make a gray-haired person look 20 years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of hair, relieves itching and scalp humors and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair."—Advertisement.

Married Life the Third Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

As Helen hung up the telephone receiver, Warren looked over his paper with a gruff:

"What made you invite her for tomorrow? Don't you know it's Thursday—Maggie's day out?"

"No, dear—not this week."

"Like to know why! Didn't we have the Stevenses here last Thursday?"

"Oh, so we did!" exclaimed Helen helplessly. "Why didn't you tell me?"

"Didn't have a chance, the way you were jabbering on there."

"But, dear, what shall I do about it?"

"Well, you've asked her to dinner—haven't you? Since we can't have dinner here we'll have to take her out."

Warren turned back to his paper, while Helen brooded over the needless expense of a dinner at a restaurant. He always ordered so lavishly, particularly when any one was with them. It would mean eight or nine dollars at least, and Miss Merrill would much rather have a home dinner. She lived in an apartment hotel and had often told Helen she was sick of restaurants.

Maggie's Attitude

Just now she had called up to say she was leaving for the South Saturday, and Helen had thoughtlessly asked her to dinner for tomorrow. But why couldn't they have dinner at home, anyway? Maggie could prepare the dessert and the salad before she went off. She would ask her about it now.

Dinner was almost ready, and when Helen went into the kitchen Maggie was creaming the potatoes.

"Maggie, I forgot tomorrow was your afternoon off, and I've just asked Miss Merrill for dinner. Don't you think you could fix things before you go so I could get dinner without much trouble?"

"Don't know what I could fix, ma'am," answered Maggie, as she beat a spoonful of yellow butter into the white frothy potatoes.

"Why, you could at least make the dessert and fix the salad, couldn't you?"

"Well, I never get away from here till 2 o'clock—takes me all morning to do the work. I don't see where I'd have any time."

It was so rarely that Helen ever asked Maggie to do anything extra that now she flushed with resentment at her blunt unwillingness. To leave her strictly alone seemed the only way to get along with Maggie, for while she did her routine work faithfully and well, if allowed to do it her own way, she was always sullen when interfered with or when asked to do anything additional.

And now she launched into a long, excited argument about how she had planned to go to South Orange tomorrow afternoon, and if she stopped to fix things for dinner she could not get off at all; how with this big apartment and everything to do she never had a moment to herself; could do no more than she did.

Above everything else Helen hated an argument or a discussion of any kind, and now she interrupted her with a sharp:

Helen Is Angry

"Now, don't begin all that, Maggie. I'm not complaining of your work. As long as you have your own way, you do it very well. I know that, and I try not to interfere with you. But the few things I DO ask of you I want done without all this discussion."

"But I'm just telling you, ma-am, that I can't do no more than I do. But, of course," with the air of a martyr, "if you want me to stay in tomorrow and get dinner, why I'll have to stay."

"You know very well I don't want that, Maggie. I've never yet kept you on any of your afternoons off. I only asked you to fix something for dinner in the morning, and now I don't want you even to do that. I never want any one to do anything for me unless they do it willingly."

And Helen flounced out of the kitchen thoroughly angry. She was beginning to realize that Maggie dominated her more and more; that she was getting almost afraid to ask her to do anything for fear of starting one of her long arguments or reasons why she could not do it.

"What was the trouble in the kitchen?" demanded Warren, when they sat down to the table.

"Ss-sh, dear," as Maggie pushed through the swinging door with the soup. "Oh, Mrs. Dowsan called me up today," with the attempted carelessness with which one always changes the subject when the person talked about suddenly enters the room.

"Well, what did she have to say?" asked Warren.

Then, as Maggie went out:

"Dear, she was just as sullen and disagreeable as she could be!"

"Who? Mrs. Dawson?"

"Oh, you know I mean Maggie," impatiently. "I just asked her if she couldn't fix the dessert and salad before she left tomorrow, and she began one of her long arguments about all she had to do and of how hard the work was here." Then, quickly, as Maggie entered again, "They went to the opera Friday—'Tosca,' I think it was."

Warren only grunted. He would not exert himself to talk for the benefit of the maid.

Helen continued the discussion of Mrs. Dawson until Maggie served the roast and vegetables, and would have no excuse to return until she rang for her to bring the salad. Then she relieved her mind by telling Warren all about it—how Maggie was growing more and more domineering and "set" in her ways.

"Well, it's your own fault," shrugged Warren. "She wouldn't dominate you if you didn't let her."

"But, dear, what can I do? In so many ways she's the best girl we've ever had. She's absolutely honest and sober, she's scrupulously clean and works all the time—but she can't bear to be told anything. If I tell her how to do the least little thing, she always has some reason or argument why it can't be done that way."

"Wouldn't stand for it for a minute," declared Warren. "But, of course, if you're as easy a mark as that—she's going to put it over you."

When Helen finally rang for the salad she noticed that as Maggie brought it in she glanced quickly from her to Warren. To Helen there was something pathetic in the glance, as though she knew they had been discussing her. Her face was slightly flushed, too—could she have been crying?

Helen's Thoughts

Helen was tender-hearted to a fault, and the thought of Maggie out there alone in the kitchen, feeling that Warren and she were in here talking about her, quickly melted her anger. It was two against one, and the one was in the helpless position of depending upon the other two for her living.

A great many things flashed through Helen's mind in the next few moments—the drudgery of housework, and the greater drudgery of the scrub or charwoman, so often the fate of those too old for housework. And Maggie was no longer young. Perhaps she had been out in the kitchen thinking of just these things, wondering, if she lost this position, how long it would be before she could get another, and how much longer before she could get none at all.

Then Helen thought of herself, secure in the protection of her home and her husband. Surely she could afford to be generous to this other woman who was so alone.

After dinner she crept into Warren's lap and told him of all she had been thinking at the table, ending with:

"Dear, she DOES do her work well, and, after all, that's the main thing. Let's try to put up with the rest. We can afford to," nestling her face against his neck. "We've got so much, dear, and just think how little she has!"

But the cold practicability of the morning often hardens the softened mood of the night before.

And as Maggie served breakfast with a stolid silence, in which there was a strong hint of sullenness, Helen's sympathies began to wane. After all, there was really no excuse for her attitude of last evening. Since so few extra things were asked of her, she should do them cheerfully and without discussion. The more Helen thought of this, the more she felt that Maggie DID dominate her, and that she was foolish to allow it.

So all morning she did not go into the kitchen. By leaving Maggie strictly alone, she would let her feel her displeasure. And she argued farther that it was better for Maggie herself not to be encouraged in her "set" ways.

It was not until after she had gone for the afternoon that Helen finally went out to the kitchen. She was not surprised at its spotless order, for Maggie always left it like that. But she was surprised to find in the pantry a freshly made sponge cake, and in the ice box a mold of fruit jelly, a bowl of cream ready to be whipped, a cup of salad dressing and the salad washed, wrapped in a clean cloth and laid on the ice to be crisp.

When Helen closed the ice box, it was with conflicting emotions. And before she left the kitchen her resentment of the morning had again softened to the sympathies of the night before.

The Ancient Greeks Gave the First Cabaret Shows

Story by Margaret Hubbard Ayer. Sketches by Michelson

The Earliest Greek Dances Were Like Our "Ring Around a Rosy," Girls and Boys Dancing Together in a Big Circle to the Music of Their Own Songs

By Margaret Hubbard Ayer

THE Greeks were the first to invent the now celebrated cabaret shows.

No, they did not turkey trot, for they probably knew that they had a reputation for art and culture to hand down to future generations.

But every Greek of fashion or importance gave dinner parties which were even more costly than those we read about today, and the main part of the entertainment was the cabaret, the singing and dancing by paid entertainers which went on during the meal.

The Greeks paid an immense amount of attention to dancing, as they considered it one of the finest methods of physical training and all the great educators and statesmen of the Golden Age advocated dancing for the young people of both sexes.

Plato demanded in his "Republic" that every child should be trained systematically to the highest physical development of which it was capable, and he considered dancing the best possible method of attaining this degree of perfection which was the ideal of every Greek youth or maid.

Children were trained from the fifth year and danced at all great festivals in public.

The earliest Greek dances were like our "ring around a rosy," girls and boys dancing together in a big circle to the music of their own songs. These dances are often mentioned by Homer.

Later, when the dance became part of the education of all Greek youths, the accompaniment was played on the flute and dancing included a knowledge of music, poetry and all arts. Greek dancing, while it looks easy, was not the simple happy-go-lucky thing it seemed. A professional dancer was trained many years before he or she appeared in public. They had to know their own art thoroughly, and the poetry of motion was the embodiment of all that was beautiful, a thorough musical training was necessary and the best dancers had to be well up in all the great poetry of the time, as well as the very intricate symbolism of the religious ceremonial.

There was no occasion when dancing was not an expression of the Greek personality, and great dancers enjoyed unbelievable popularity.

The Flower Festival of Argos was one of the most beautiful of the Springtime dances symbolizing the awakening of Nature. It was danced by the aristocratic youths, who tried to outdo each other in beauty of movement, grace of body and pose.

One of the differences between our dancing and the antique lies in the straight foot of the classic Greek dancer and the pointed toe of the later French and Italian schools, which seems to have come by way of the Far East.

The Greeks, who wore the thinnest of sandals, or none at all, placed the foot in its natural position, straight on the ground. The American Indian still does this, and so do all aboriginal races. The pointed toe, or foot that points out from the body, was originally an affectation of dancing teachers. It was unknown to the Greek dancer, whose physical poise had to conform to the laws of Nature embodied in the highest forms of sculpture, which are still the ideals of artists and have never been surpassed.

The Widow's Bungalow Catches Fire, and Her Children Are Rescued from the Flames by Maynard

"MRS. MINOR'S house is on fire!" Beatrice repeated dully to herself.

To her mind, numbed by the shock of the announcement, the words at first meant nothing. Mrs. Minor's house was on fire! Her house, and her children were in it! Suddenly her stunned brain grasped the import of the fearful news, and, with a shriek of horror, she sprang from her chair and rushed blindly toward the door.

At the alarm, John Robbins had leaped through the long French window, and Keith Lacy and Dr. Yeager had followed him. Helen Robbins sat dumbly in her chair, the picture of helpless terror. It was Dr. Haynes who, in the midst of the confusion and consternation, thought of the agonized mother. He caught her as she reached the door of the dining room and restrained her wild flight. Throwing his overcoat about her, he hurried her across the porch and down the steps, at the foot of which stood his car. At the turn of the crank the machine sprang into life, and, lifting Beatrice into the automobile, the man sprang in beside her.

"Sit still!" he commanded. "I'll get you to the house before the men get there. Try to be brave!"

The Fire

He threw on the clutch and the car leaped away down the drive like a living creature. As they turned out of the gate Beatrice screamed shrilly. Up on the hillside an angry glow lighted the dark sky.

"Be brave!" urged the doctor, but even as he spoke a yellow tongue of flame darted up from among the trees, then sank. Again the woman screamed like a wounded animal, and once more her companion commanded her to be quiet.

As they swung into the driveway leading to the bungalow the burning building flashed into full view. Flames were pouring from one of the western windows and behind two of the others a lurid glow pulsated. As they neared the house there was a sudden crash of breaking glass and another great banner of fire was flung forth and swept upward toward the roof.

Dr. Haynes' car rushed through the little group of frightened villagers gathered on the scene, stopped suddenly, and the owner sprang to the ground.

"Are the children all right?" he shouted hoarsely.

"We don't know!" wailed a woman. "Nobody ain't seen 'em! Mr. Lacey's tryin' to find out."

Kind hands caught Beatrice and held her while she raved and struggled to free herself. For the greatest emotion of her life dominated her, and would have led her into the flames had she been released. She saw Dr. Haynes leap up the steps. Then there came another roar of flames, and a man staggered from the house, his hands held before his face. A tongue of flame darted out of the doorway, reaching for him hungrily. He screamed and fell into the doctor's arms.

It was Keith Lacy, who had tried to penetrate the burning building, but he had come forth alone.

"They're in there!" he sobbed. "I heard them calling!" And, as he spoke, another window fell in and a shower of hot glass was sprinkled over the two men as they staggered from the porch.

"Take Mrs. Minor away!" ordered the physician. "Take her away!" And, as the women in the crowd attempted to obey his order, he and Lacy turned again to look at the open door from which smoke was pouring.

A Rescuer

"Where are the children?" called the physician above the roaring of the fire.

"In an inside room," gasped the Westerner. "And the living room this side of it is in a blaze. We can't reach them!"

A man dashed past them as he spoke and sprang up the steps. He was wrapped in a blanket, and his face was hidden in shadow. For a moment he was seen in the flickering light of the doorway, which had burst into sudden flame. Then the smoke belched forth and erased him.

"HE WENT IN!" exclaimed the physician. "God! but he's got nerve!"

"He didn't!" shouted Lacy. "He jumped from the porch just as the smoke struck him! I saw him!"

He reeled and would have fallen had not his companion caught him. It was then the physician saw, by the red glare, that the young man's face was blackened by the smoke, and that he was too weak to stand. Then, telling a bystander to "look out for that chap," he ran around to the back of the bungalow. The flames were not as strong here as in front, and, with a sudden hope, he caught up the kitchen window. But the fierce heat of the room needed only the draught created by the broken window to burst into flames, and by the time he had thrust his hand through the broken pane, unlocked the sash and raised it, the room was on fire.

"It's hopeless!" he muttered. "Utterly hopeless!"

He could not reach the children in the little room in the centre of the house, and he turned to hurry back to their mother. When he reached her she was still feebly resisting the kindly hands that were trying to draw her away.

"Put her into my car!" directed the physician. "I'll take her back to Mrs. Robbins. This is no place for her. She will kill herself if she stays."

Maynard, the Hero

But even as he spoke he saw that Beatrice Minor did not hear him. Exhausted in mind and body, she had almost swooned, and she allowed herself to be lifted again into the automobile, where she lay, limp and silent.

The fire engine from the village had arrived and was pouring a small and ineffectual stream of water upon the western side of the house, which was, by now, a mass of bright, crackling fire.

An awed crowd had assembled and gazed silently at the doomed building. There was little noise save for the deep, throaty roar of the flame, and an occasional order shouted by one of the volunteer firemen. There was something appalling in the horrible certainty with which the fire did its work. People had stopped talking and were looking on aghast.

Then, suddenly a sound, part cheer, part groan, went up from the crowd. For, out through the blazing doorway a man reeled. His face could not be seen, for it was pressed to a bundle that he carried in his arms. He staggered to the end of the smoking porch and stood at the head of the steps, swaying perilously. His head was hairless and little bright patches of fire smoldered in the rags that had been his clothing. His face, when he lifted it from the huge bundle he carried, was contorted, terrible.

A dozen men sprang forward and into the outstretched arms of the foremost he laid his burden. Then, before they could catch him, Paul Maynard tottered and fell and lay very still, the light from the burning house playing redly on his seared face.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

A CERTAIN knight of Spain—where the long names come from—arrived late one evening at a wayside inn in France, and knocked for a long time on the door before he succeeded in rousing the landlord.

Then: "Who is there?" cried mine host, thrusting his head through a window.

"Don Juan Pedro," replied the traveller, "Hernandez Rodrigue de Villanova, Count de Malafa, Knight of Santiago and Alcantara."

"Sorry, but I haven't room for all of you," exclaimed the landlord. "Better try ten miles further on."

And he closed the window with a bang.

Valuable "Direct Evidence"

Our "direct evidence" includes letters from many men and women telling of the value of Hood's Sarsaparilla in generally miserable conditions of health when "almost everything" seems wrong, the whole body "out of tune."

Mrs. Shaw's example is well worth following:

"St. John's, O., June 4; 1912.

"I am glad to tell my experience with Hood's Sarsaparilla, which has won its own way into my friendship by the good it did me and others in my family. For years I was in a generally suffering principally from catarrh in the head and stomach. I was also very weak and nervous and had what you call 'that tired feeling.' The catarrh caused dreadful ringing noises in my ears. Prescriptions and other medicines did not help me.

"I had read much about Hood's Sarsaparilla, and knew personally many persons it had cured, so I had come to place much confidence in it when I bought a bottle for myself. I made up my mind to give it a thorough trial and was really surprised, since I found it was doing me good while I was taking the first bottle, so I continued with several bottles until I was perfectly satisfied with what it had done. My and I adopted Hood's Sarsaparilla as my family medicine. My sister also took it with good results. Many have spoken of the benefit to me, and I never miss an opportunity to praise Hood's Sarsaparilla." Jennie Shaw.

M'VEAGH BLUFFED BY GUILTY OLEO DEALERS, SAYS EXPERT CASSIDY

Mr. Cassidy today criticises the decision of Franklin MacVeagh, former Secretary of the Treasury, to allow a compromise at the rate of ten cents on the dollar, of the government's claims against big oleo dealers charged with manufacturing colored oleo.

"If these men were willing to pay $100,000, as they did, they were guilty of the offence charged," declares Cassidy. "They simply bluffed the government by a threat of extended litigation.".

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

From Washington comes word that as one of the last acts of his administration, Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh agreed to a compromise with the big oleo manufacturers who have been detected in a gigantic fraud in colored oleo.

Under the law these men would collectively be liable to pay back taxes of over a million dollars. Secretary MacVeagh accepted their compromise offer of a little over a hundred thousand dollars.

e Secretary MacVeagh was bluffed out—as they would say in the old Mississippi River steamers. If these men were willing to pay $100,000, they were guilty of the offence charged against them. If they were guilty, they should have been forced to pay the full tax.

They simply bluffed the government out.

I want to recite again the facts in this case.

The federal law provides for a tax of a quarter of a cent on every pound of oleo manufactured in which no coloring matter is used.

But the law provides for a tax of ten cents a pound on every pound in which coloring matter is used.

This last tax is intended to be prohibitive, for oleomargerine is colored for one purpose and one purpose only. It is colored to deceive the consumer into thinking he is buying butter.

Colored with Sulphur.

Months, or perhaps years ago, some manufacturers of oleo came to the federal revenue inspectors. They said: "We can buy now a yellow oil for use in our oleo. The manufacturers of this oil say it is not artificially colored. If this is true, the oil being a regular ingredient of oleo, a product in which this oil is used could not be taxed. Are we right?"

The federal inspectors asked to see the oil. It was submitted to them. The most careful analysis failed to reveal any artificial color. Then the revenue men went to the oleo men and said:

"You may use this oil if its manufacturers will let us see their process of making it."

The manufacturers refused. They said: "The oil is not artificially colored and that is enough. We won't tell you anything about how we make it."

So finally the oleo makers went to using this yellow oil in their butter. The subject puzzled chemists all over the country. At last someone tested the oil for sulphur.

Lo and behold! He found that the oil was colored with sulphur fumes.

Then began the fight to collect the back taxes. The firms involved were located all over the country. They prepared to fight, and then the government decided to accept their offer of a compromise.

Immediately Judge Landis of Chicago called a special Grand Jury to investigate the frauds in colored oleo. Then the House Committee on Revenues began an investigation. The compromise was held up.

Dangerous Precedent.

The House committee, in the hurry of the last few days of the session, closed the investigation. Judge Landis resumed his probe.

But MacVeagh gave his sanction to the compromise.

It was stated in Chicago that Judge Landis will direct his investigation to ascertain whether the Federal government officials have power to accept a compromise with violators of the law.

Obviously, an extremely dangerous precedent has been established. The situation is this:

The government finds a group of food crooks have violated the laws and are liable to a fine of over $1,000,000.

They prepare to prosecute. The food crooks say: "See here, if you prosecute us, we'll fight. We may not win, but we'll guarantee to keep the case in the courts for years, and we'll drag it out through more than one administration.

"However, if you wish, we'll just pay you $100,000 --- call the thing square."

And the government accepted.

What possibilities are opened up to future food law violators by that precedent!

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Stock markets closed weak after a morning in which little support was given from any quarter. In Boston Granby finished four points lower. Other notable declines were Superior, off 1¼, and Copper Range, off 1½. Calumet & Arizona had declined a point. Most other losses were fractional.

In New York there were heavy declines in Tobacco issues. The loss in American Tobacco was around 9 points, in Liggett & Myers 3 and P. Lorillard 5. Reading was about the weakest of standard leaders and closed 2⅜ lower. Other heavy losses were Amalgamated 1¼, Union Pacific 1⅝, Southern Pacific 1, Canadian Pacific 2⅛ and St. Paul 1⅛. Low priced industrials were notably lacking in support. Money conditions and political apprehensions were blamed for the slump in prices. Foreign news was not reassuring and European markets were nervous.

The New York bank statement reads: Average statement—Excess cash reserve, $4,872,750; decrease, $4,049,500; loans, decrease, $5,051,000; specie, decrease, $5,115,000; legal tenders, decrease, $131,000; net deposits, decrease, $6,300,000; circulation decrease, $176,000. Actual statement: Loans, decrease, $23,510,000; specie, decrease, $4,062,000; legal tenders, increase, $295,000; net deposits, decrease, $23,546,000; reserve, increase, $684,000.

New York Market Weakens.

Weakness developed early in the New York market with Union Pacific leading the break. It sold lower than the ebb mark touched on December 12 last. American Tobacco declined half a dozen points very quickly. American Sugar was another weak issue at the opening. At the end of fifteen minutes the tone was unsettled and the market pulse was feverish. Within half an hour Amalgamated had lost about a point and Reading and Canadian Pacific were off 1⅜ each.

In earlier trading Woolworth common had reached two points and fractional losses were recorded for Erie, American Smelting, Missouri Pacific, Southern Pacific, Steel, United States Rubber and Northern Pacific.

The Curb was heavy.

Americans were weak in London as a result of the offerings of German bankers for loans. Canadian Pacific and Union Pacific were sold in Berlin.

Why Standard Oil Stocks Fell.

Reports that Attorney-General McReynolds is going to conduct a court campaign against the dissolved oil trust caused weakness in Standard Oil issues in the outside market in New York yesterday. Standard of New Jersey closed at 350, a net decline of 14 points from Thursday's close; Standard of New York sold down from 635 to 605 and Standard of Indiana from 328 to 321. Prairie Oil and Gas from 327 to 320, Galena common from 300 to 291. Atlantic Refining from 655 to 610, South Penn Oil from 935 to 910, Southern Pipe Line from 256 to 252, Solar Refining from 655 to 630.

Will Cut Wool Tariff First.

It is stated in Washington that the leaders of House Democrats have decided that when tariff revision is begun the wool schedule will be taken up first, as it is regarded as the corner stone of the protection system. The House will pass the "pop gun" bills, or the schedule-by-schedule revision. The Senate will lump the lump the bills and make a general tariff bills and make a general tariff measure. Through this plan it is possible to effect tariff revision by compromise. Chairman Underwood desires to prevent this treatment of the tariff problem.

Latest News About Copper.

The statement of the Copper Producers' Association for February was better than expected. Predictions were unanimous that the report would show the stock of surplus metal in this country had increased. Instead of 10,000,000 pounds' gain figures told of a shrinkage of nearly a million.

The part of the report most pleasing to the trade was the growth in exports. The total of more than 72,000,000 pounds was the best showing since the first month last year.

The metal price in the domestic market was firm yesterday at 15 cents, but it was raised in Europe, where Amalgamated quoted 15¼ cents for March delivery, and fractionally less for April and May. The American Smelting and Refining Company for April quoted the same as Amalgamated, £69 10s. Other selling agencies in London for May quoted 15⅛ cents.

It is estimated that in February Calumet and Hecla and subsidiary companies produced 8,926,730 in refined copper. January last production was 10,429,510. In February, 1912, the output totalled 10,803,641

Financial News in Brief.

Commercial failures this week in the United States, as reported by R. G. Dun & Co., are 283 against 263 last week, 334 the preceding week and 344 the corresponding week last year.

It is stated in Chicago that American Can sales in February showed an increase of from 12 to 15 per cent. over business done in the corresponding 1912 month.

Anthracite coal shipments last month amounted to 5,674,169 tons. This was a decrease of 201,799 tons as compared with the corresponding month last year.

On Monday the United States Steel Corporation will make public the amount of unfilled tonnage on its books when February ended. According to "interests in touch with the company's affairs" the figures will show a decrease of from 150,000 to 200,000 tons.

F. L. Milliken & Co. have issued a convenient folder showing high and low prices for last month and dividends for this one. It gives other information useful to investors.

CHARGES DENIED BY MORMONS

Somerville Mormons call "false and slanderous" the attack of Mrs. Louie E. Brittain of Revere, the anti-Mormon lecturer. Mrs. Brittain recently said that the Somerville Mormons were waiting in their priesthood meetings for a revelation to adopt polygamy.

Elder Ulysses W. Greene, apostle of that body in this district, calls her statement "false and slanderous."

"No church on the face of the earth presents a higher standard of morals to its members than this Somerville church and other churches of that 'communion,'" says the elder. Mrs. Brittain in an interview says that the Mormons in this country give you the impression that they are divided into two parts."

"So they are, in a sense," insists Mrs. Brittain, "but when they have councils they all sit together on certain crucial questions.

"Can't Fool the People."

"Why do they both have their publishing houses in the small town of Independence, Mo? Never have these two bodies been able to make plain that they have not some close connection with one another, which they are hiding from the world.

"Elders may not speak with one another from these different bodies in public, but why do they get together in general council?

"That they do this is well known and it has never been denied.

"They may fool the people part of the time, but they cannot fool the people all the time."

In a letter to the AMERICAN explaining the position of the Somerville Mormons with reference to polygamy Elder Greene says:

Editor American:

"In the articles appearing in the Boston AMERICAN on the subject of 'Mormonism,' an occasional reference is made to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, at times inferring that they also believe in polygamy and other false and pernicious doctrines.

"In the issue of Tuesday, March 4, I find the following paragraph: 'You can ask even the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, which is on Sewall street, Somerville, whether they are not waiting in their priesthood meetings for a revelation on polygamy.' This is a false, slanderous, and misleading inference. The ministry of the Reorganized Church are not waiting for, or expecting any revelation to practice polygamy, or any other evil. No church on the face of the earth presents a higher standard of morals to its membership.

"Let me state that we do not teach, practice, or believe the doctrine of polygamy, nor have we ever done so. We regard it as unscriptural, unscientific, and contrary to the nobler sentiments of manhood. We look upon it with unmixed abhorrence, as a menace to that great cornerstone of civilization, the home. We believe that a man should have but one wife.

"Not Bound by Party."

"We do not believe in political interference. Our members are free to support any political party without dictation or interference from the priesthood.

"We believe that the laws of the land should be strictly obeyed, and hold to the principle laid down by Joseph Smith during his life.

"He that keepest the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land."

Ysaye, Soloist at Symphony, Scores in Show of Technique

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Ysaye was the soloist at the Symphony concert yesterday afternoon, and the great violinist was greeted as warmly as though it were his first instead of his fourth or fifth visit to Boston of the season.

His choice fell upon the Vivaldi concerto for violin, orchestra and organ, and the Saint Saens concerto in B minor, which is very rarely played. In both works he displayed himself in full possession of that marvellous technique and almost miraculous magnetism which is the explanation of his great vogue.

The most interesting number orchestrally was the Loeffler "Pagan Poem," which is descriptive of that Vergil Eclogue which tells how a young woman tried to revive the waning love of her shepherd by sorceries. The score calls for piano as well as orchestra, and there are such unusual stunts as three trumpets in obbligato, off stage. Mr. Heinrich Gebhard appeared at the piano, as he did at the original performance.

The piece is full of harmonic eccentricities, is marked by originality of construction, but melodically contains little that can be called beautiful. It is effective enough, and marks the composer as one with very unusual grasp of the modern orchestra.

Sinding's Symphony in D minor received a vigorous and inspiring performance. It is a composition that contains much that is attractive.

A Clergyman's Text: "If Christ Were a Member of Wilson's Cabinet"

Rather a Difficult Text for Intelligent Preaching. But Interesting

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

The Reverend A. E. Barnett, rector of the Episcopal Church of Our Redeemer, in Philadelphia, preached last Sunday on the text at the head of this editorial, "If Christ Were a Member of Wilson's Cabinet."

He read opinions from various citizens and then gave his own views, which, on the whole, were not exciting.

He thought that Christ in Wilson's Cabinet would oppose "Dollar Diplomacy," that he would abolish monopolies and forbid the building of fourteen-million-dollar battleships.

He also thought—and that was his best suggestion—that Christ would take all the children out of the mines and mills. He suggested that such a being in Wilson's Cabinet would probably be assassinated, pretty generally hated for a while, and, then, fifty years later, have a monument erected to his memory.

Since a Reverend Clergyman sets the example, it may be permitted to continue his speculation.

Our opinion is that nobody can guess, and perhaps least of all the Reverend A. E. Barnett of the Episcopal Church, what Christ would do if He were a member of Wilson's Cabinet.

He would probably ask a good many questions to start with—and they might be something like this:

How is it that you Cabinet members are all here to talk of plans for those ALREADY prosperous?

How is it that you consult bankers and manufacturers, but none of the poor women that I see carrying heavy loads in the streets?

How is it that you all look so nicely dressed, smoothly brushed and well fed, WHEN THOSE WHO SHOULD HAVE YOUR FIRST THOUGHT ARE ANXIOUS, WORRIED AND UNHAPPY?

How do you explain the fact that in a land that could easily support in perfect peace of mind and comfort a thousand millions of your brothers and sisters, you permit the present thin population to live a life of worry and anxiety?

How is it that you have societies that take care of old horses and of old dogs—and none to take care of old men and old women?

There is no doubt that Christ, if in Wilson's Cabinet, would be denounced by all "respectable capitalistic newspapers" as a Socialist of the most dangerous kind. And many respectable clergymen of all denominations would preach against Him, telling Him to "respect property and vested interests."

Don't Miss the Automobile Show---It Is an Education

Take Your Children. Let Them Get Interested in Modern Work, and Wonderful Mechanical Achievement

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

Tonight the automobile show, a great undertaking made necessary by the development of the automobile, will open in Boston.

For two weeks all the wonders of automobile construction will be shown at Mechanics' Building. Go and look at this exhibition, whether you own a car or not.

You will, or you ought to, own an automobile some day. And apart from owning an automobile, there are education and inspiration in the wonderful exhibition of mechanical genius that begins tonight.

If you have children, take them with you and let them see what has been produced by the mind of man.

Before they go, remind them of the ways in which men used to travel, how the Queen of Sheba traveled on a camel to see Solomon—which, by the way, had no rubber tires—or the Tartar fighters used to travel on horseback with their supply of meat packed away between the saddle and the horse—quite different from the modern limousine. How the aristocrats of only a few hundred years ago went abroad in the streets of London, carried about in little sedan chairs, held by two men.

And then explain to them how the genius of the human race, and its wonderful power for improvement, is shown in these great automobile exhibitions.

Let them pick out a small runabout that can be bought for $500 or less—and that can do more in one day than any horse could do in a week, and explain to them how that destroys the last excuse for horse-racing and gambling, the fast horse being only a joke now, or an amusement instead of a necessity.

Let your wife look over all the cars with you, and persuade you if she can—and she ought to—that you can perfectly well afford to get one.

If you feel that an automobile is too expensive to keep in town, look at those cars, realize the pleasure and the health of your family, and ask yourself whether you ought not to move out of town, where you pay nothing for keeping the car, where the car would take you to your train with your wife or your oldest boy to drive it, and where you could save enough on rent, to say nothing of fresh air and sunshine, to pay for the automobile expense.

There are a thousand good reasons for going to see the automobile show, and not a single reason for failing to see it—SO GO!

You Must Have Faith in Yourself to Win the Success That You Hope Ultimately to Achieve

Every Time You Lament Your Own Handicaps and Weaknesses and Assail the Methods of a Rival You Waste Your Energy and Dissipate Your Mental Force in Useless, Unproductive Thought

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

A MAN who asked a friend for financial help, received it; and the friend indulged in a little encouraging talk in addition to the loan.

"You must have more faith in yourself," he said; "and must realize that the whole matter of success is in yourself. You can succeed in spite of everything and everybody, if you fully come into consciousness of your own responsibility, and your unlimited powers."

"But when I tell you how I have been handicapped," the man began, "and how little encouragement I have had, and how people have wronged me"—but the friend stopped him.

"Every thought of that kind you entertain and every word you utter is so much energy wasted and mental force dissipated in useless, unproductive ways.

Conditions Within You May Handicap Worse Than Any External Drawback

"No human being can handicap another, unless that other lets his mind power lie unused; or employs it wrongly," he said, and he spoke the truth.

Self-pity, harsh judgments of others, envy, jealousy, doubt, mental indolence, weak longings for more than you have won by strong endeavor, all these things prevent more men from becoming successful than all the unjust conditions which exist in our industrial systems.

Waste of thought is the most common waste which exists, and there is no extravagance so far reaching, and so vast in its devastating results.

For thought is the God-given power which was meant for man to use constructively, and to have, and be, and do whatever he wished.

If you are a merchant, waste no time or breath in talking about the dishonesty and unworthiness of your rivals in business.

When You Attack and Denounce Another You Are Losing Ground Yourself

If you are a physician, or a beauty specialist, or a dressmaker, or teacher of wisdom, the same advice applies to you. All the vitality you can draw from space keep to make your own methods successful.

Each time you indulge in criticism and backbiting, or in open denunciation of the methods of some competitor, you are losing ground yourself.

This is the law and you cannot change it.

I have known a physician to devote the greater part of his time while calling on patients, or while they were in his institution, to the disparagement of brother doctors whose ideas did not coincide with his own.

There are metaphysicians who are similarly inclined even though such a procedure is in contradiction of the laws they teach. But while it is a simple matter to teach philosophy, it is very difficult to make it a part of our daily working habits.

Every time we stop in our appeal to the forces within or without for strength and aid to criticize a fellow man, who follows some other line of procedure, we turn off the current the Divine Electrician has always in working order for our use.

There is room for every sincere soul on God's earth.

No one can crowd another. No one can injure another's business.

You alone can injure or interfere with your own affairs, and the surest way to do it is to interfere with the affairs of another.

Wish every man godspeed. No matter if he opens a place of business next door to you in direct competition with you, wish him godspeed.

Conserve Your Own Forces and Let Others Work in Peace

Say to him and say to yourself, "There is room for good workers everywhere. We are like two stars in space, and one does not interfere with the other's light. We only give the world more light."

It may be hard work to bring yourself into this state of mind, but once you arrive there you will be conscious of new power, new force.

If your competitor is on a lower plane and opened his business merely to injure you, rest assured this attitude of mind will have tenfold the power to overcome his efforts that a resentful and defiant one would have.

Conserve your forces. Nothing dissipates them like flaw-picking. Think about your own splendid possibilities and let your mind reach out for new ideas and new developments in what you are doing, not back and down, seeking flaws in what your competitors are doing.

Let other artists paint, let other authors write, other merchants sell, other actors act, and other singers sing. Wish them all glory, success, happiness.

Lift your soul to the vastness of space and refuse to be petty and small and jealous and critical.

Ask for all the force, all the light, all the wisdom that is being stored up for your use. Receive it, and go your way.

'Woman's Cry Loudest Thing in World Today'

She Wants to Extend Her Talents Into the World's Housekeeping for the World's Good—She Wants to Be Allowed to Transmute the Clean, Fine, High Ideals of Womanhood Into the Realities of the World

By ADA PATTERSON

"THE woman's cry is the loudest thing in the world today," said T. P. O'Connor; "yes, and the most noteworthy."

Had the Irish genius of observation pursued the subject he would doubtless have added that, like the infant's, the woman's cry would not cease until she had obtained that for which she cried. "What is the trend of feminine psychology?" demanded a lawyer. "Men know that the entire sex is in a state of unrest and disquiet and dissatisfaction, but we don't know what is in their minds because they won't tell us. They don't seem to want us to know."

That eminent lawyer is farther from the truth than he has ever been in all of his long and brilliant career. A woman may not choose, when she is in the sulks, to tell her husband or father or brother that she craves a new hat or gown. Perhaps she has learned, through many household scenes, that the subject is a sore one. Or she may not confide in him the secret that she has quarreled with her neighbor, and her reticence is justifiable, for such mistakes and tumults of soul belong to the sacred reserves, if she wishes there to place them. Men do not vaunt their weakness nor advertise their mistakes, and if Mrs. Brown does not wish to tell that she has had a back-fence argument with Mrs. Smith, that is her own affir.

The Idea That Women Are Subtle and Secretive Is Overworked

But the idea that women are subtle and secretive, that they are beyond understanding and past finding out, has been overworked. In trivial matters, the purchase of a purple flower for her mother's bonnet, or adding to the allowance of her son at college a few dollars from her own, she may be a bit secretive. Granted, for sake of argument, that woman is something of a magpie in hiding secrets of this sort, usually they are of no more consequence than the bits of colored glass the non-committal bird places in a dark corner and covers from prying eyes.

In regard to the large issues of her life a woman wants to be frank, and is. The woman's cry, that thread-like soprano piercing the chorus of all the other cries of the twentieth century world, is for a larger, more rounded and useful life. The sum of all her demands is to be an individual of more worth to her family, more value to society and more satisfaction to herself.

To the end of this desired state her cry is for a full right to her own property, whether she has earned it by her own effort, or has earned it by helping and urging her husband to save it, or whether it has been hers by the accident of inheritance. She rebels against the right which exists in some States in this otherwise glorious Union of a husband who may have subsisted upon her providence all their married life to prevent her withdrawal from the bank of her own savings account, or her sale of the house she has builded by her own efforts, or to bequeath his unearned half of the increment to his own relatives or friends, or even the woman for whom he has given her cause for jealousy, if the possibility of it still exists in the heart long before emptied of all love of him. Such instances, not uncommon, add volume and poignancy to the cry of woman.

The cry of woman is for an equal standard of morality for the sexes. She is tired of fractional decency of living. She does not want to bear alone the white banner of chastity. She wants to see the man of her affection marching beside her in the path of purity. She wants to wreck the foolish old traditions of license in conduct for the other sex, to overturn all the barricades of privilege and prerogative by which he has defended his dalliance along the broad way.

Her cry is for simplified living, that she may have time for mental growth. She welcomes the devices that make housekeeping a briefer and easier task. She wants housekeeping to become not an absorbing, exhausting occupation, but a pleasant, daily incident. She wants the kitchen to be a subordinate element, not the hub around which the household revolves. She wants plainer eating and better thinking. She cries for this because it will give her more time to talk with her family about more vital matters than beefsteak and fried potatoes.

Welcomes Devices That Make Housekeping an Easier Task

She wants a half hour or more every day for contact with other minds. She cries for the stimulus of association with other women who are doing home work and world work. She wants to develop the new art for women, self-reliance. She begs the right to think instead of to echo the thoughts of others.

She wants sex to be subservient to mind. She wants to so regard it that she may become a friend of another woman, not look upon her with savage enmity as a possible rival in the interest of some male human. She wants to be a friend of women, not only in the collective, but the individual sense, and to do this she declines to longer honor sex as supreme.

She wants to remain single if she thinks she is against matrimony, and this without odium or the fear of poverty in old age. She wants to earn such wages as will enable her to make provision for her old age, outside of an old ladies' home.

She Wants to Be Treated as a Comrade or a Partner

If she marries she wants to be treated as a comrade and business partner, instead of a plaything or household servant. She wants her opinions to be treated with respect, not tolerance or ridicule. She wants to be a leader for her children, not an awed follower in their educated steps.

She wants to extend her housekeeping talents into the world's housekeeping, for the world's good.

She cries for the right to be guided by the trained mind, instead of tacking to the impulses of the vagrant heart.

The woman's cry is to be allowed to transmute the clean, fine, high ideals of womanhood into the realities of the world.
